A New York Skyscraper

With the announcement that plans for an 80-story sckscraper, to be erected on the site of Madison Square Garden, are drawing to completion, engineers and architects are of the general opinion that an entirely new era in the construction of tall buildings has begun.

It will be, of course, by far the largset building in the world. Its base, covering a square block, will be surmounted by a tower which will reach more than 1,100 feet, one-fifth of a mile, into the air. The new building will house a population equal to a small city. Its inhabitants will far outstrip the capacity of the Equitable Building on lower Broadway, which houses the largest number of workers under one roof. The Equitable elevators acrry 14,000 workers every morning.

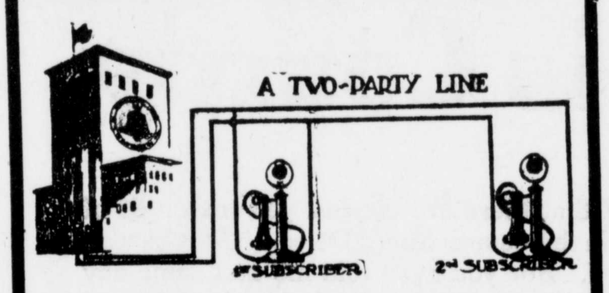

At the Equitable Building the postman carries away 88,000 pieces of mail each day. Were they stacked up the pile would rise well over the top of the Woolworth Building. A whole fleet of postoffice trucks would be required to carry it away if it were not collected every hour. It takes two and one-half hours for a machine to cancel the stamps on the matter. The machine cancels 3,600 stamps an hour.

The telephones in the new building will almost require a ecntrol office of their own. In the Equitable there are more than 1500 telephones. If they were stacked end to end, they would extend more than a mile. The number in the new building will exceed that number by almost a thousand. It will require half an ordinary big city telephone exchange to handle them.

At first, tall buildings look as though they are made of pretty solid stuff. By looking at the pile of glass necessary to fill the windows, it becomes walls of the big buildings are glass. evident that a good per cent of the

And that brings up the question of window washing. Twenty men are required to do the job at the Equitable and they never finish it.

As for foundations, the figures on the exact distance they will have to go down have not yet been made public. The Woolworth foundations go down 110 feet and those of the Equitable sink 90 feet below the street.

Party Line Courtesy

Courtesy in the use of the telephone is nowhere more necessary or more appreciated than on a party line. Both parties on the line expect and should receive good service and as little interruption as possible.

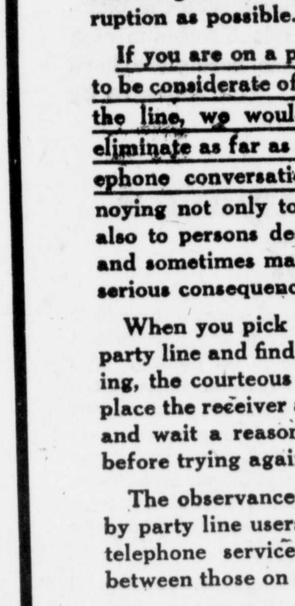

If you are on a party line and desire to be considerate of the other person on the line, we would suggest that you eliminate as far as possible lengthy telephone conversations. They are annoying not only to your neighbor, but also to persons desiring to reach him, and sometimes may result in delays of serious consequence.

When you pick up the receiver on a party line and find another person talking, the courteous thing to do is to replace the receiver as quietly as possible and wait a reasonable length of time before trying again to use the line.

The observance of these suggestions by party line users will result in better telephone service and better feeling between those on the same line.
