The Fame of That Wonderful Vanilla Ice-cream Spread Near and Far

In those days, a quarter of a century ago, nearly every family made its own ice-cream. Two young men, Henry & Lee Gill, decided to make ice-cream for sale, because they enjoyed making—and eating—it at home.

They knew that merely "good" ice-cream would not be good enough, for most home-made ice-cream was good.

So they worked, studied and experimented until their vanilla ice-cream had a new smoothness, a finer flavor, an added richness.

They opened a little shop to make this new and better ice-cream for the fine families of the town.

Wherever Gill Bros. Ice-cream was served, the guests commented on its deliciousness. Then they ordered it for their own homes. The fame of the fine flavor spread near and far.

And people drove in from miles around to get that wonderful vanilla ice-cream.

The little business had to expand to meet the ever-growing demand. The brothers added more freezers—They outgrew their little shop, and duilt larger and still larger.

Other ice-cream makers began buying Gill Bros. Ice-cream for their most particular trade; and dealers in other towns wanted Gill Bros. to insure the success of their ice-cream "parlors," as ice-cream stores then were called.

Poultry raising is a subject that should interest the whole family.

To Start Terrapin Farm.

Two of the most toothsome delicacies of Somerset, the diamondback terrapin and the bullfrog, are fast disappearing, and although the small boy still catches a few frogs, the hunter who used to ship dozens of them and generally received around $1.50 a dozen for them from the big hotels is about out of business.

As for the diamondback terrapin, they are so few that when some one catches two or three of them it is considered unusual.

Along the rivers years ago watermen made a comfortable fortune out of their trade in terrapin and soft crabs .

The terrapin has about disappeared from the rivers while the frogs are also becoming scarce.

At one time there were several who started terrapin and frog farms on the Eastern Shore, but for some reason they did not seem to pay, and most of them have disappeared.

Recently a number of prominent men of the Eastern Shore were attending a banquet, and become involved in a discussion regarding the toothsome terrapin, and as a result several of the guests have formed a company and will undertake to start a terrapin farm in the upper section of the Peninsula. Crisfield is the only point on the Eastern Shore where a terrapin farm is now known to exist.

Marriages In Maryland.

The United States Census Bureau has just completed a survey on marriage and divorce. The figures show that Maryland leads the country in ratio of marriages—1,539 per 100,000 inhabitants.

Is this something of which to be proud As a marriage market is Maryland exalted in surpassing all other States? Or is it a challenge to our marriage laws?

It is too easy to get married in Maryland. There are a few conditions, at least, that should be altered. The age limit of the woman should be higher. Persons, either the man or woman, if under the specified age are not required to bring a parent to give consent for the license to the Clerk of the Court, but may bring a signed statement. Who knows whether the statements was written by the parent? The Clerk of the Court does not have to investigate; he takes it face value. No marriage should be legal in our State unless performed in the presence of witnesses, but there is no law requiring witnesses.

Are the Gretna Greens in our State accruing us honor? Elkton, Ellicott City, Harper's Ferry, and Cumberland are noted places for quick, easy, multitudinous marriages. We may lead all other states in number of marriages in proportion to population, but we are offering a haven for the elopers, the law evaders, and the mysterious of other States, who find Maryland an "easy mark."

Looking at the new touring car from the side, you are at once favorably impressed with the effect of longer, more graceful lines secured by enlarging the cowl and raising the radiator

Slanting windshield and one-man top lend material aid in giving the entire car a lower, more stylish appearance.

An apron connecting the radiator with the fender skirts is also a decided improvement.

A comfort feature much appreciated by owners, is the additional leg room provided by the enlargement of the cowl.
