THE BEACH COMBER
By Grantland Rice

Here on the beach, to know
Only the dead soul's dream;
One with the ebb and flow
Over a soundless stream;
Lost to the life beyond
One with the wreck and spar,
Alien and vagabond
Under an alien star.

Under an alien star,
Yet never thought of home;
Over the ways afar,
Out through the white-reefed foam;
Here where the Night of Tears
Crowns not a silent sea;
Dead are the yesteryears,
Dead are the years to be.

Hope and the grip of faith,
Fame and the pride of clan,
Each but a vanished wraith
Under the dead soul's ban;
God of the days that were,
Hell with its wrath of red,
Love that so worshipped Her,
Dead as the soul is dead.

Dead—yet a dream that creeps
Through the last nights that bar,
Where the last dreamer sleeps
On by the final scar;
Deeper than hell is deep,
Higher than heaven's high,
Daring in one mad sweep
Both through eternity.

WASHINGTON COLLEGE

The halloween dance, held in the gym last Friday night, Oct. 26, was well attended. Prizes were given for the best costumed couple and the couple judged as the best dancers. Mr. W. Yates and Miss Margaret Power were awarded prizes for the best costumes, the former being dressed as a gypsy man, the later as a gypsy woman. Miss Dorothy Woodall and Mr. Percy Donoghay were judged the best dancers. Favors, consisting of paper horns, were given to each dancer. During the intermission punch was served. Kelly's Kollegians furnished exceptionally good music.

Classes in physical education will start in the gym on November 10, under the direction of Coach J. T. Kibler.

The first issue of the Washington Collegian is out. Five more issues will follow at regular periods throughout the college year.

As has been the custom for years, the Washington students held their "pajama" Halloween parade last Wednesday night, Oct. 31. The band leading the parade was sadly lacking this year, owing to the fact that the leading musicians of the hill were playing elsewhere for a dance. As the group wended its way down through the streets of Chestertown a person incapable of hearing would have thought them ghosts. However, anyone that could hear the noise they made could foster no thoughts of silent, spooky ghosts. As a climax to the affair a big bon-fire was held at the foot of the college campus.

Mr. Foster, of New York, addressed the student body on Oct. 30 and 31. He spoke along Christian lines.

On Oct. 31 the Mt. Vernon Literary Society gave the following program in Wm. Smith Hall: Scriptures, Heck; Impromptu, Powell; piano solo, Miss Cora McWhorter; practice debate, "Resolved that the government should exercise control over the railways." Affirmative, Hoight; negative, Parker; impromptus by Misses Messick and Warren, Messrs. Cullen and Blackstone; Auguan, W. McGinnis; Critic's Report, Miss Hill.

The Adelphia Literary Society gave the following program on Nov. 1 in Wm. Smith Hall: Scriptures, Armstrong; short talk, Layman; reading, C. M. Jarman; impromptus; Moonbeam, Williams; critic's report; critic.

Everybody is set to beat Mt. St. Mary's Saturday. Probably a "pep" meeting was held in the gym on Friday night before the game, as has been the custom.
