School Board members . . .and HS students also

By Jill P. Carter
AFRO Staff Writer

Smooth, young, handsome, and articulate—they look like other high school students—but their ideals reach far beyond those of many teenagers.

Kobi Little and Tyrone Patterson are new student commissioners to the school board and very proud of where they stand.

"I feel a lot of pride and accomplishment," said Kobi, a student at Dunbar High School. "Its like being on the board of directors of a $4 million corporation. This is a different experience because I'm dealing strictly with adults and my views are respected."

The young scholars are drastically different, but enjoy working together.

"It is great to have a colleague like Kobi," Tyrone said. "It takes away half of the pressure." Kobi believes they can cover a lot more ground by working together. "We can maintain a professional friendship," he said.

Although their personalities are dramatically different, they share a singular vision for their fellow students.

"I want to figure out a way to decrease the drop-out rate and stimulate more interest in school," Tyrone said. "I know it will be hard to do that, we have to first stimulate parents' interest."

Kobi, in the other hand is talkative. He wears his confidence on his sleeve, and never hesitates to stand up and be counted.

"My approach to life is that it's only what you make it. Don't be afraid to say what you think because if you don't, someone else will, and you will have missed the bus," Kobi said.

"My inborn nature doesn't allow me to be easily intimidated," he said. "If I say something they don't like, they don't like it, life goes on."

Kobi has spent equal time in public and private school. While he feels private school

Kobi would like to see more courses and projects that stimulate analytical and critical thinking, and require practical application.

"I would like for every school to be adopted by a corporation," he said.

"One thing I'm sure of is that the schools cannot stop working for students at 3 o'clock.

"There are so many problems affecting students, so they give up on school because they have to work or take care of a family," he continued.

"We have pregnancy because we have sex. I don't think we will be able to stop people from having sex. AIDS education need to begin in the third and fourth grades."

has offered more intense learning, he believes public schools create more of a sense of school pride and regional pride.

He has always been an involved student and feels he received a well-rounded education having spent two years in a predominantly white Quaker School in North Carolina.

He says he was not surprised to have been elected student senator of the ASCBC, and consequently appointed to the school board.

"I think I'm respected by most of the students involved in the ASCBC, but I was torn between running for president of ASCBC and student commissioner," he said.

"I'm happy with my choice because being student commissioner is more powerful. Just having the board listen means a lot, and I believe I can use my persuasive power to influence them on some issues."

Between school board meetings, Kobi enjoys reading the newspaper.

He is enrolled in the advanced college preparatory health professions curriculum at Dunbar.

He has been student government president and has participated in the legislative liaison program with the legislature, and as a lobbying facilitator at two state training sessions.

He enjoys running track at Dunbar, but has a growing love for politics.

Always moving Kobi is working this summer in Washington, D.C. in the Department on AIDS and AIDS education. He is also going to New Mexico for a national student government convention.

Tyrone is keeping busy at Gilman with his intense studies in the Upward Bound Program.

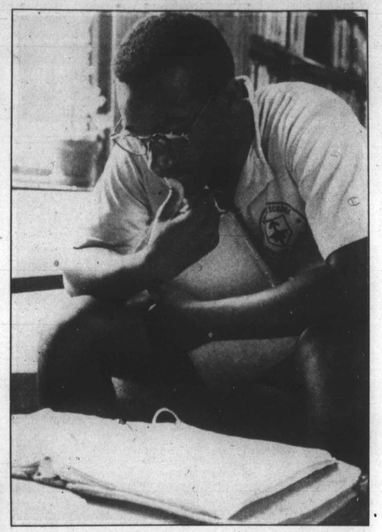
The program is designed to expedite and acquaint students, over the summer, with classes offered during the regular school year so that they will approach them with some previous knowledge and understanding.

"I want to be a well-rounded person, said Tyrone.

"I love being involved. School is a major part of my life and it's fun to me."

Kobi is enjoying his time on the board so much that he wants to be reappointed in 1990.

"I want to be remembered as someone with a great interest and whose contributions made it a better operation."



QUEST FOR TRUTH— Tyrone is always looking for new reading material, desiring to learn all he can.

STUDENT SCHOLAR— Tyrone Patterson enjoys studying-even in the heat of the summer.

Community Services Division created by State's Attorney

By Ejike Obineme
AFRO Staff Writer

In an effort to expand the ability of the State's Attorney's office to interact with schools, churches and community groups in Baltimore City, Stuart O. Simms, City States Attorney Tuesday announced the creation of a Community Services Division.

The new division merges the Victim - Witness Assistance Unit and the Community Liaison Unit. "The restructuring insures that matters concerning the public, both in and out of court will be coordinated," Simms said.

Other goals of the division include training some volunteers who can help certain groups affected by crime in the community, including senior citizens, adult abuse victims and sex offense victims.

If a member of any of these groups is required to testify in court, the volunteers will help them understand the court system better.

The division also aims at developing a channel of communication between judges and members of the community during the sentencing stage with a view to communicating to the judges how the criminals or the criminal acts affected the community.

This move is designed to help the judge decide how long a criminal can be put away, in the interest of the community.

Kenneth Strong, who has served for the past five years as the State's Attorney's Office Community Liaison, will become the chief of the Community Services Division.

Simms also announced that Pamela Widgeon, who currently works as an aide in the Victim-Witness Unit will play a key role in the new division.

Widgeon has previously worked as a paralegal in the Sex Offense Unit and as a reporter for the AFRO. Simms said that Widgeon, with a strong sense of public service will have an immediate impact on broadening office community relations.

While the need for a Community Services Division has long been apparent, Simms said that public concerns expressed at the Mayor's April 6 Town Meeting on Crime reinforced his decision.

"I am enthusiastic about the new division," Simms said. "Building on the fine records of both units and drawing on talents of all staff members, the State's Attorney's Office is entering a new era of service to the community."

COMMUNITY CALENDAR

Camp for kids with Sickle-Cell

The Central Maryland Committee on Sickle Cell Anemia, Inc. will again sponsor Camp Sunshine — two, 2-week summer day camp sessions for children with sickle cell anemia. The sessions are for children ages 6-14 and will be held from July 11-22 and July 25-August 5 at the YWCA — 128 W. Franklin Street. Participation is at no cost to the child and is on a "first come, first serve" basis.

Applicants must be residents of the Baltimore Metropolitan area. Recreational, educational and support group activities will take place. Transportation will be provided from key locations and a free lunch will be served. For applications and/or more information, contact the Central Maryland Committee on Sickle Cell Anemia, Inc., at 828 E. Baltimore Street, Baltimore, MD 21202 or call 837-3050.

NAACP Convention Set

The NAACP has scheduled its 1988 Annual Convention in Washington, D.C., from Sunday, July 10 through Thursday, July 14 at the Washington Sheraton Hotel.

In this, an election year, the NAACP has chosen "Vote! Be Heard" for its Convention theme and returns to the nation's capital after an absence of 12 years.

The nation's oldest and largest civil rights organization — with over 1,800 branches and half a million members — expects in excess of 16,000 persons to attend the Convention.

The official opening of the Convention will take place on Sunday evening at 7 p.m. when Dr. Hooks will deliver his keynote address at a public mass meeting. Dr. William F. Gibson, NAACP Chairman of the Board, will give his opening address the following night at 7:30 p.m.

Boule celebration at Hyatt

Zeta Phi Beta Sorority, Inc. has scheduled the official opening of its 68th Anniversary Boule Celebration on Sunday, July 10, at the Baltimore Convention Center at 7 p.m. The public banquet will feature U.S. Congressman William H. Gray, III of Pennsylvania as guest speaker. Representative Gray, who represents Philadelphia, is serving his fifth term in Congress. He chairs the House Committee on the Budget, a post to which he was re-elected by his colleagues in January, 1987. The Banquet is open to the public. Reservations can be secured at 664-6041. Presiding over the Boule, hosted by Alpha Zeta Chapter, Baltimore, is International Grand Basileus Eunice S. Thomas. Under the leadership of Soror Thomas, the sorority has strengthened its programs, making them more relevant to contemporary issues and more applicable to the needs of the community. Soror Mary Fields is basileus of the host chapter. Soror Beatrice A. Mayo is Boule Marshall. Soror Linda J. Brown and Elaine M. Johnson will serve as associate marshalls. The Boule will run through July 14.

Open House at Cylburn Arboretum

The Cylburn Arboretum Mansion, 4915 Greenspring Ave., will be open from 2-4 p.m., Sun., July 10. Cylburn Naturalist, Glenda Weber, will lead nature walks. Cylburn volunteers will be on hand to guide people through the display gardens. A brief history of Cylburn will be given during a tour of the first floor. The museum and library will be open visitors. The Cylburn Arboretum volunteers are responsible for the work in the gardens and mansion.

Parkville kids display art

Youngsters under the guidance of Art teacher Joy Herrick at Villa Cresta Elementary School, made Posters for the upcoming 5th Annual Parkville Towne Centre Fair. The judges had a difficult time selecting the ten best from over 30 entries. Winners are: Katie Roeder, 1st, Phil Lancelotto, 2nd, and Joe Stampfel, 3rd place. Honorable Mention: Kim Harle, Julie Subotich, Mike Gaston, Kellie Branham, Sarah Buhrman, Erin Trupia and David McShea. Posters will be on display during the month of August at the Parkville Post Office. The Fair will be held Saturday the 10th of Sept. on Harford Rd. from Taylor Ave. north to DuBois Ave.

Baltimore's Best has workshops

The "Baltimore is Best" Program will host the "Baltimore's Best Neighborhoods" Workshops on Saturday, July 9, 9 a.m. to 3 p.m., at the Hyatt Regency Hotel, 300 Light Street. Past winning neighborhoods will conduct workshops on: Anti-Crime/Safety, Senior Citizens/Youth Programs, Health/Sanitation, Human Relations/Community Spirit, and Beautification. Neighborhood leaders will have the opportunity to apply organizational skills-expertise-know-how and a variety of useful information.

City Council President Mary Pat Clarke will welcome neighborhood leaders. The workshops will kick-off the "Baltimore's Best Neighborhoods" Contest.

Free blood pressure screenings offered

The HWR Medical Center, affiliated with Bon Secours Hospital, will offer free cholesterol and blood pressure screenings each Friday in July. Free blood tests for cholesterol will be available Fridays from 9 to 11 a.m. Those having the test must not eat after midnight the evening before the test. From 2 to 4 p.m. on Fridays, free blood pressure screenings are provided. Call the HWR Medical Center, located at 3612 Falls Road at 467-2083.

BNBL moves toward boys' championships

By Fred Lindsey
AFRO Sports Writer

In the BNBL, the boys' march to the City-Wide Championship began Tuesday and is proceeding competitively towards the championship games on July 12th, at Morgan State University.

With an hourly starting time, beginning at 6:00 p.m., the 11, 13, 15 and 18 and under boys are serious about their basketball and we are looking forward to some exciting contests.

The semi-final rounds, excluding the 11 and under, will be played Monday, July 11 at Medfield and Virginia Baker Recreation Centers. Call the centers for the times.

Southern Methodist picks black to head troubled cage program

DALLAS (UPI) — John Shumate, a Notre Dame assistant whose only head coaching experience came at an NAIA school, Thursday was hired as basketball coach at Southern Methodist University.

Shumate, a star player at Notre Dame and an assistant under Irish coach Digger Phelps, said he took the job only after he became convinced SMU was committed to running an athletic department, "the right way."

"We hired a man with great character," said athletic director Doug Single, given the task of rebuilding a department hit by a scandal that forced a two-year suspension in its football program. "He can be a tremendous role model. He is dynamic and can promote our program."

This will be the first major college head coaching job for Shumate, 36, who graduated from Notre Dame in 1974 and who that year was the fourth player taken in the NBA draft. He played professionally with the Phoenix Suns, returned to Notre Dame as an assistant, then served as head coach at Grand Canyon (Ariz.) College.

Shumate's record at that NAIA school was 58-33 and he left there to again coach under Phelps at Notre Dame.

"There is no question that SMU is on the right track," Shumate said. "It wants to do things the right way. I am totally convinced that SMU is being steered by a captain (School President Kenneth Pye) who knows where he is going and what he wants.

"I think all the negatives are behind us. What is more important is where we are going tomorrow and I am proud to be a part of where this school is going."

Top women bowlers converge on area

The greatest women tenpin bowlers in the world will be competing in the Baltimore-Washington area when the Fair Lanes $35,000 LPBT Capitol Classic takes place at Fair Lanes Capital Plaza in Hyattsville next week.

This is a major stop on the Ladies Pro Bowlers Tour.

Some of the top bowlers who will be competing in the event are Leila Wagner, a resident of Annapolis; Betty Morris (Stockton, Cal.), the 1987 Bowler of the year; Lisa Wagner (Palmetto, Fla.), the Seagram's U.S. Open champion; and Wendy MacPherson (San Diego), the 1988 WIC Queen champion.

The pros will be shooting for a 1st place prize of $7,000.

"We are very excited about the lady pros coming to the Baltimore/Washington area," said Jim Self, Fair Lanes Operations vice president and tournament chairman. "The ladies put on a great bowling show, and I know everyone will enjoy watching them bowl."

Area amateur bowlers also will have an opportunity to compete with the women.

Adult and youth pro am tournaments will precede the Ladies Pro Bowlers Tour stop on Sunday.

The youth pro am will begin at 1 p.m. Youngsters bowl three games with the pros, receive a souvenir shirt, guest tickets, and a chance to win trophies. Entry forms are available at all Fair Lanes centers.

Adult pro am squads will follow at 3, 5, 7, and 9 p.m. Participants bowl three games with the pros, receive a souvenir jacket, guest tickets, and a shot at the $1,000 first place prize.

Bays lose fourth straight, hope to rebound Saturday

The Maryland Bays were left high and dry for the fourth straight game last Saturday, losing 1-0 to Boston at UMBC Stadium. But buried in the game report were signs that the tide might be turning for Lincoln Phillips and company.

That score came off one of only six Boston shots in the game. Otherwise, the home team dominated, outshooting the Bolts 16-6 and forcing twice as many corner kicks (6 to the Bolts' 3).

Despite the loss, coach Phillips's tactical experimentation accomplished at least two of its desired results. It opened up the Bays' offense. Only two players (one of them the goalie) ended the day without taking at least one shot. And it tightened the defense considerably. The Bolts' 6 shots were the fewest allowed by the Bays this season.

The defeat dropped the Bays (8-7) to third place in the ASL North behind the idle Washington Stars.

On Saturday, the Bays entertain the Southern Division-leading Ft. Lauderdale Strikers at UMBC, while the Stars travel to Boston to try and break the Bolts' string of four consecutive homefield wins.

Save for Zina

Zina Garrison managed to gain one 1988 Wimbledon title.

Defeated in the third round of the women's singles and in the quarter-finals of the doubles with teenage partner Katrina Adams of Chicago, Garrison teamed with 42-year-old Sherwood Stewrt of The Woodlands, Texas, to capture the mixed doubles.

Zina and her partner had to win twice on closing day because rain set back the weeklong tennis calendar.

They downed the British duo of John Fitzgerald and Elizabeth Smylie in the semis then took a 7-6, 6-1 match from fellow-Americans Kelly Jones and Gretchen Majors.

CCC benefit golf Monday

The 5th annual Catonsville Community College Foundation golf tournament will be played at the Rolling Road Golf Club, Monday.

A noon shotgun start is scheduled with over 125 community golfers entered. The foundation's day of golf will also include special events held at CCC's new Student Services Building.

A golfer's lunch, cocktails and dinner, refreshments on the golf course, gifts for players, and awards for winning players and teams are scheduled.

Teams of challenging foursomes will headline the fund-raising tournament this year. Lt. Governor Mickey Steinberg and Bullets Coach Wes Unseld are the 1988 honorary chairmen.

Major sponsors for the tournament are Chadwick Manor Shopping Center, Comcast, Greenbaum & Rose, the ISPA Company, Koons Ford & Koons Lincoln Mercury, and Witzke Funeral Home.

Tournament chairman, John C. Weiss, III, reports that proceeds from this year's event will exceed $25,000.
