FIRE STATIONS BILL VETO:

Council says its not over yet!

By Alisa Samuels
AFRO Staff Writer

A frustrated Baltimore City Council, stumped by the mayor's veto Thursday of a bill regarding fire protection services, is fickle as to whether it has enough votes to override the mayor's rejection.

"We need two or more votes to override the veto," said Dominic "Mimi" DiPietro, First District.

The Council must collect 15 votes by July 27 to override Mayor Kurt L. Schmoke's veto.

Sheila Dixon, Fourth District, whose district is in danger of losing a McCulloh Street firestation by September 1, as part of a $2.4 million cut from the Fire Department's budget, said she and her Fourth District colleagues do not favor overriding the mayor's veto.

The Council had proposed Council Bill 255, to delay closings of three firestations until the Board of Fire Commissioners developed a comprehensive plan to study the city's fire protection and ambulatory services.

"We don't want to override the mayor's veto," Dixon said, adding, "I don't know how to vote on this bill."

Mayor Schmoke hired a consultant to evaluate Baltimore's fire service needs and decided to close three stations, two in the Sixth District and one in the Fourth, by Labor Day.

The Fourth District councilmembers were willing to listen to the mayor's plans for the future of firehouses, including consolidations of some, to avoid future closings, Dixon said.

The Fourth District has supported the mayor on most of his legislation.

But other opposed, the mayor's plans.

"I'm teed off and I am so mad about it," said DiPietro. The Third District is scheduled to lose equipment at the station on Eastern Avenue near a hospital.

Most councilmembers wanted the stations to close after the consultant had completed his comprehensive study.

Twelve members met with the mayor Wednesday to offer a compromise to the scheduled closings.

"But it was very fruitless," said Joseph "Jody" T. Landers, of the Third District.

Landers said the mayor's cold reception would probably motivate other councilmembers to vote to override the veto.

"I think we're very close to a overriding the mayor's veto," said Landers.

Family fuss ends as son shoots father

By Ejike Obineme
AFRO Staff Writer

A teenage boy who killed his father in an argument pleaded guilty to manslaughter Friday in a Baltimore City Circuit Court.

Charles H. Townes, Jr., 17, shot his father, Charles H. Townes, Sr., 43, twice in the abdomen, during an April 11 argument that turned into a physical confrontation in their apartment in the 2600 block of Fairview Avenue. Townes Sr., later died from injuries sustained from the shooting.

Townes Jr.'s lawyer, Paul Polansky said very little about the case Friday. He could only say that his client "was basically defending himself."

The maximum sentence he can get for manslaughter is 10 years, and Judge Elsbeth Bothe has set sentencing for September 7.

Police report showed that there was an argument between Townes, Sr., and his daughter, Charlotte Townes, 18, when Townes Jr., came in and joined in the argument to protect his sister.

The report indicated that prior to the argument, the father and his son had a long standing fued. The son was supposed to get some cocaine for his father, but he did not do it, and that intensified the on-going argument.

One thing led to another and the three ended up in the son's bedroom, still arguing. At one point, the elderly Townes left his son's bedroom and while he was gone, his son searched for a gun he had hidden in his bedroom with the intention of using it to scare his father

NAACP breakfast honors ACT-SOs

By Alicia Benjamin
AFRO Staff Writer

Talented teenagers from Baltimore City were honored last Friday at a National Association for the Advancement of Colored People Breakfast at the Belvedere Hotel.

The NAACP program, the Afro-Academic, Cultural, Technological and Scientific Olympics, attempts to encourage and inspire black youths to pursue excellence in academic and cultural areas.

Students were presented with awards in dramatics, drawings, painting, sculpture, voice and other areas at the breakfast.

The 12 first place winners left for the national ACT-SO competition in Washington, D.C. after the meal.

The national competition in Washington was held on July 9th and 10th in Washington, and parents and mentors were invited to attend the events.

"Our goal here in ACT-SO is to put emphasis on those who have achieved outside of athletics," said George Buntin, Executive Secretary for the Baltimore branch NAACP.

Buntin told the students not to give up and to aim to achieve their highest goals.

Osborne Payne, McDonald's representative, thanked the parents for participating actively in their children's endeavors.

The McDonald's corporation sponsored the scholarship awards that were given to the first, second and third winners in each category.

"There is just not enough of this going on in our communities," he commented.

"But we know our boys and girls have talent," he continued. "It's our job to identify and help them move forward," Payne said.

Elner Prater told the audience that the young black

Minority contractors sue city

By Charles H. Brown
AFRO Staff Writer

Arnold M. Jolivet, president of the Maryland Minority Contractors Association (MMCA), has filed suit against the City of Baltimore and one of it's agencies.

The suit charges that the city wrongfully deprived Jolivet, also a private general contractor, of, "sacred and fundamental rights and privileges and immunities guaranteed, secured and protected by the Constitution and Laws of the United States.

In December of last year, MMCA was awarded a disposition agreement by the city for a five-story building at 110 E. 23rd St.

The agreement called for the Association to pay the city $500,000 for the property and to submit plans for the renovation of the 35,000 square foot building by February 4th.

The MMCA had originally planned to use the property as an incubator site for minority engineering firms. The association ran into problems when it missed its first deadline.

The City had written an additional 30 day extension into the agreement but that passed as well and still the MMCA hadn't managed to submit its plans.

Jolivet claimed that the city was partially at fault. According to Jolivet the city was late in mailing information requested by Jolivet for the completion of the Associations.

After the expiration of the 30-day extension, Jolivet requested an additional extension from the city but was turned down by Baltimore's Housing and Community Development agency.

The agency also informed Jolivet that his agreement for the purchase of the property was being cancelled due to lack of fulfillment.

The city is now putting the project out for Requests for Proposals (RFP's).

"The city is going through it's normal process of disposing of a property which is to

MD Jackson delegates braced for convention

By Robyn-Denise Yourse
AFRO Assistant Editor

GLENARDEN, MD — Pledging a show of unity, Jesse Jackson supporters and delegates will meet today with their candidate to discuss the role they will play in both the Democratic Convention and his future political life.

Just last week, more than 200 well wishers gathered here at city hall to raise funds that will help send Maryland's 29 Jackson-pledged delegates to the Atlanta Convention July 18.

It was their last meeting before their departure this weekend.

"We are a very unified delegation," Rep. Kweisi Mfume (D-Md) said, "and we are prepared to follow Mr. Jackson's direction. Our loyalty to him is unwavering."

Speaking before a crowd of Jackson supporters, Mfume recalled earlier Democratic Conventions where black leaders were sometimes shunned. This year, black coalitions will total more than 35 percent of the Convention's over-all make-up.

"No matter what Jesse Jackson accomplishes, the race for us will continue," Mfume said.

"We run on the backs of people like Fanny Lou Hammer," he added referring to the late civil rights activist who made national headlines after Democratic officials refused to seat her at the 1968 Convention.

In the spirit of Hammer — who sold baked goods and chicken dinners to foot her travel expenses to the Convention, Mfume said — Maryland Jackson supporters paid $25 each to mix, meet and talk politics
