IMPORTANT MEETING HELD

Citizens Of Chestertown Meet Friday Evening And Discuss Important Subjects Pertaining To Town

At a meeting of the citizens of Chestertown, held in Firemen's Hall Friday evening, a number of important issues relative to the improvement of Chestertown were discussed. One of the main issues brought before the meeting was the disposition of trash and garbage. A few years ago a trash and garbage system was adopted, which included collection of refuse from each house in town three times a week. This system encouraged cleaning up back yards and proved a great asset toward the sanitation of the town. Each year the amount of trash to be hauled increased, until the cost of removing same came above the proportion of the taxes allotted for this purpose and the system had to be temporarily discontinued, with the exception of disposing of garbage.

At the meeting Friday night it was decided to petition the Legislature to allow the Commissioners of Chestertown to levy a 5-cents per $100 tax, so that the trash disposition might be continued.

It was also decided to ask the legislature to allow the Commissioners of Chestertown to levy a tax of 6 cents per $100 for the upkeep of the Chestertown Volunteer Fire Co.

A number of other subjects were discussed, but no definite action was taken.

—The second monthly tuberculosis clinic to be conducted by Dr. John M. Nicklas, of the Maryland Tuberculosis Association, will be held in the Court Room of the Kent County Court House on Monday morning, Feb. 11, beginning at 9 o'clock. Bonnett & Co., who has been doing business in Chestertown for about two years and has made many friends by his liberal and square dealing, is offering to the shopping public an unusual lot of bargains in a page advertisement in this issue. Woodrow Wilson, 28th President of the United States, a commanding world figure and chief advocate of the League of Nations, is dead. He died at 11.15 o'clock Feb. 3, after being unconscious for nearly twelve hours. Mrs. Wilson, Miss Margaret Wilson, Joseph Wilson, a brother, and Admiral Grayson his physician, were at the bedside.

Just before his death the great War President opened his eyes His wife and daughter spoke to him, but he did not respond. Ten minutes later he passed quietly away. No word was uttered.

All day Saturday and Saturday night he had been sinking rapidly, his pulse becoming fainter and fainter, until it ceased to beat

The nation and, in fact, the whole world, was prepared for his death. The papers and health bulletins from his bedside had forecasted the finale of one of the greatest careers in American history with accuracy.

President Issues Proclamation

In a proclamation to the people of the United States, President Coolidge paid a most fitting tribute to the dead Ex-President, reviewed his early life and career and directed that the flags of the White House and of the departmental buildings, as well as the flags throughout the states, be displayed at half-mast for thirty days in his honor.

Press Laud Ex-President

The press of the entire world were almost unlimited in their praise of the dead statesman. We quote below extracts from a few as follows:

New York Times—A great light has gone out. The fact that it had long been visibly burning low will not lessen the shock with which the country learns that it is finally extinguished.

New York Tribune—The figure of Woodrow Wilson in death stirs in the nation the same tense emotions which surrounds him living. Shattered in health for more than for years, a private citizen for nearly three years, the silent force of his extraordinary personality lived on undiminished.

New York World—By the death of Woodrow Wilson the greatest figure in world history that has ever arisen from American soil is removed from the scene of his labors. His influence survives, a might and growing power. His ideals, only in part translated into action during his troubled life, remain as a rich heritage for his countrymen, a source of inspiration and a store of wisdom for guidance toward a finer civilization.

New Orleans Times-Picayune—In mental morality, in loftiness of aims, in rigidity of purpose, in inflexibility of will as in blood, Woodrow Wilson was of the covenanter breed. He spent himself as the soldier spends. Broken in body, maimed in heart and mind, he held true to the unbending line of his conviction. His eyes to the last fixed upon the distant star of a world self-cleansed of hates and wars.

Louisville Courier Journal—The 20th century, said Pope Bendict, should be called the Wilson Century. His is the sole great mind the war has produced.

The Boston Herald—No other American President made in his day a record so difficult to estimate at a corresponding period after his termination of officiel responsibility.

The Chicago Tribune—In his distinguished career Woodrow Wilson has left a deep mark on the history of our country.

Chicago Journal of Commerce—Woodrow Wilson probably had a more profound effect on world history than any other American President since Washington.

Portland Oregonian—It has been said that history will hold a fair page for Woodrow Wilson and that he will be forever known as one of America's greatest sons and most devoted servants.

Philadelphia Public Ledger—A very great man, who inevitably will tower as one of the shining figures of history, has gone.

Philadelphia Record—Woodrow Wilson is dead. The monument he raised lives on. Its foundations were builded on the everlasting rock of an imperishable ideal.

Philadelphia Inquirer—Of his sincere devotion to his ideals there is no question. He spent his strength devotedly in the public service.

The St. Louis Globe-Democrat—In view of the nature of the principles and ideals which he impressed upon the world we do not hesitate to predict that posterity will rank him among the great leaders of the nations of mankind.

Davey Punctures Myth

That presidential years are not business bogeys is definitely proved by Congressman Martin L. Davey, of Ohio, in a recent article. "Mr. Davey analyzes the actual records of business history all the way back to the Garfield campaign of 1880 and shows that, during this time, good and poor presidential years, so far as business is concerned, have run 50-50—that, as a matter of fact, there having been five lean presidential years and five fat ones. He concludes, "Unless a majority of us get the foolish notion that business is bound to be dead in a presidential year, 1924 should be a period of substantially normal business conditions."
