THE CONQUEROR

By Grantland Rice.

Here I shall wait
To meet the rush of some relentless fate,
Content to know that I will be supreme
Against the bitter sword that life may wave;
Where I yill hold to one eternal dream
Of valor riding roughshod to the grave.

Here I shall stand
Against misfortune, with its crushing hand,
And, though it crowd me to the lowest pit
Where I may see no starlight in the sky.
Yet I shall struggle upward, bit by bit,
Until I see the white dawn drifting by.

For any soul
The flight is more important than the goal,
Strife, toil and struggle, with their share of pain,
Are winning trainers down the long, hard beat,
And fate in all its fury, sweeps in vain
Against the soul that marches through defeat.

The game means more
Than any flare of glory from the score;
The lawn is brighter that we see at last
Through shadows blacker than the stain of sin;
And when we know the final fight is past,
What is there left worth while for one to win

SUICIDE NEAR CAMBRIDGE

YOUNG MAN SHOOTS GIRL FRIEND THEN COMMITS SUICIDE

Spurned when he made a last appeal, repeating a proposal of marriage made at intervals for more than a year. Hobart Price, twenty, fired a bullet into his brain near Cambridge early Sunday, after shooting Miss Josephine Colbourne, sixteen, as she fled under a volley of shots, according to Stengle Marine, State's attorney of Dorchester county.

One of the five shots, fired at the girl lodged in her hip. She was taken to Cambridge Hospital where it was said she would recover. The shooting occurred on the farm of the girl's grandmother. Annie Johnson. at Wright's Wharf, on the Choptank river.

Price wrote two farewell letters, according to Mr. Marine. One addressed to the girl, was lost when she dropped it as she fled. The other beginning "Dear Mother," declared life held no further appeal and asked forgiveness.

No inquest will be held, according to Mr. Marine, who said the shooting was witnessed by Price's brother, Herman; Samuel Johnson, thirteen. a Baltimore boy.

Miss Colbourne said she and the Johnson boy were picking cherries near the McCormick home when she saw Price coming across the wheat field of the adjoining farm of his mother, Mrs. Charles Price. The girl said:

"He had gone to New Jersey April 1, and later to Baltimore, and I did not know he had returned. He had a queer look, and when he reached Sam and me I asked him if he had been drinking. He asked me if I was going to marry him and said it was the last time he was going to ask.

"I told him he might as well go away and stop bothering me because I wouldn't go with him. He said:

"Well, here's a note: read it' and held out a piece of paper. It said something like 'I have come back to get you.' I started to walk away and he put both arms around me. I cried out for him to let me go, and after a minute he did. He said:

"'Well, I've written mine. Have you got anything to write?'

"Then when I said I had no reason to write anything, he pulled out the pistol and started shooting."

Price reserved the last bullet, according to Mr. Marine, and pulled the trigger with the muzzle of the pistol pressed behind his ear.

The last shot was fired as the girl's uncle, Clarence Johnson, strode from the house, his shotgun leveled at the young man, according to Mr. Marine. Price is said to have called out as he dropped down to get out of range:

"Don't bother to shoot. I'm going to end it myself right now."

Herman Price. who came down the lane with a team, ran forward as his brother collapsed.

The cylinder of the pistol, Sheriff L. H. Morray was told, would not revolve when Price raised it to his head the first time. He cooly opened the weapon, snapped out the spent shells, and, fixing the remaining bullet in place, raised the pistol to his head again.

Miss Colburne said she had known Price several years and that "he had always wanted me to go with him."

So Was This Chestertown Woman Who Tells Her Expedience.

All too often women accept their pains and aches as natural to their sex. They fail to realize that weak kidneys are often to blame for that backache, those headaches, dizzy spells and that tired, depressed feeling. Thousands have found new health and strength by helping the weakened kidneys with Doan's Pills—a stimulant diuetic. This Chestertown case is one of many:

Mrs. Bertie Crouch, 111 S. College Ave., says: "I had a miserable aching across my back and wasn't able to be on my feet a great deal of the time. There was no let-up day or night to my suffering. Headaches alwost drove me frantic and my head swam with dizzy spells. My kidneys acted irregularly. I used Doan's Pills from Hudson's Drug Store and they quickly stopped the aches and pains and I could do my work without suffering."
