WHERE CENTRAL QUITS AT NIGHT

Continuous Service Exceptional In Australia's State-owned Central Offices.

Continuous telephone service available at any hour of the day or night, every day in the year, is the general practice in the United States, and inability to have such service always at hand would seem extremely inconvenient to the average American. In most foreign countries, however, it is taken for granted, except in the larger cities, that only at certain hours in the daytime is it possible to use the telephone.

In Australia, for example, where the telephones and telegraphs are operated by the Government, less than ten per cent. of the telephone exchanges remain open throughout the night. The other 90 per cent. close in the early evening and their telephones are "cut off," generally, until 9 o'clock the next morning. At these exchanges also telephone service is not regularly given on Sundays; and on public holidays these central offices are open only for an hour or so. At more than 70 per cent. of the total telephone exchanges in Australia not over nine hours of telephone service is rendered even on week days. In fact, at many Australian exchanges service is given for only eight hours a day during the week, and not at all on Sundays.

Not only are Australians, outside the large cities, generally restricted to daytime usage of the telephone, but more than 37 per cent. of the telephone exchanges in the Island Continent shut up shop also in the middle of the day for a "luncheon period" of one hour. If telephone service is desired during this intermission notice must be given to the "officer in charge" and extra "opening fees" must be paid.

In addition, more than 20 per cent. of the Australian exchanges have a "weekly half holiday," closing from 9 A. M. until 1 P. M. one day a week. There are also over 800 central offices at which the hours of service are merely "arranged between 7 A. M. and 11 P. M., according to requirements of subscribers served and local arrangements." In short, the average Australian needs a time-table to tell him when he can use his telephone.

ENGLISH WRITER LAUDS AMERICAN TELEPHONES

Joseph Morris, the English journalist, who is now in this country is a great admirer of the American telephone system, concerning which he says: "Your telephone directory is a ponderous and awe-inspiring volume and shows to what extent you have developed the telephone system both within and without your gates. Here you have made it an everyday necessity, whereas, outside of strict business, we look upon it as a luxury.

"I cannot speak too highly of the service, and an attempt to make a comparison between it and London would be the height of folly. But there our system is government-owned and operated and yours is the result of private enterprise. That speaks a whole lot."

16,000,000 MILES OF WIRE TO RUN THROUGH TUNNEL

World's Deepest Telephone Subway Now Being Bored Beneath New York City Streets.

With subway trains roaring overhead, their passengers unaware of the engineering feat being performed beneath them, the deepest underground channel for telephone cables in the world is being constructed in New York City.

A new group of telephone buildings is being erected on West Thirty-sixth street where some day eight central offices will be in operation serving the Times Square-Pennsylvania section of the city. Here, two large shafts, each 50 feet deep, were sunk into bedrock on either side of Seventh Avenue, and a cross-town tunnel blasted between, 25 feet beneath the tracks of the Inter-borough subway. When completed, the conduit system will be capable of carrying nearly 350,000 separate telephone wires. It will measure 242,000 duct feet which is sufficient to contain about 16,000,000 miles of telephone wire in cables of 1,200 pairs each. The tunnel itself is eight feet wide and eight feet high, hewn out of solid bedrock 50 feet below the surface.

TELEPHONE "STILL ALARMS" ARE INCREASING RAPIDLY

Fire department records from the larger cities show a great increase in the number of still alarms in the last two years. A still alarm is usually one that is reported over the telephone, and more and more are people becoming accustomed to telephoning their calls for firemen. One reason why so many still alarms are sent in is that people have discovered a quicker route to get word to the firemen than by running out of doors and hunting for the nearest fire alarm box. This does not mean that the fire alarm boxes have outlived their use. They are still considered vital ad juncts to the city fire service, but the increase in the number of calls for fire service that come over the telephone is noteworthy.

Bake things he likes with FLAVO FLOUR. It's healthful and tissue building. There is more nutrition and a sweeter taste in FLAVO FLOUR. It is made with a new process by the most modern mill in the world. Nature's food values and the delicious flavor of the wheat are not milled out as they are by other methods. FLAVO FLOUR is milled at home from home wheat. It is good. Buy it and patronize Home Industry.
