SHEEN CAVALRY

Rector Of Old St. Paul's Church Doing Fine Work Among Young Men

Rev. Mr. Sheen, rector of old St. Paul's, is doing a good work among the young men around Fairlee in the establishment of a troop of Cavalry, as we have noted before. The Baltimore Sun, in a recent issue, printed the following regarding this move by Rev. Sseen:

Sheen's Cavalry is composed of young men of Old St. Paul's parish in South Kent. This embraces the section around Fairlee. The members of the cavalry are boys "off the farm," and once a week they are put through the regulation drill by Mr. Sheen. It is a purely military organization, unattached to any other body. It was organized a year ago by Mr. Sheen to promote the idea of leadership among the boys, and is non-sectarian.

The company now has 32 members with the two girls participating in their drills.

The requirements to become a member are that the applicant be an owner and a lover of a horse, and to prove that he takes care of the animal.

During the winter Mr. Sheen leads his charges in fox hunting, and he tells of one old fox that seems to enter into the sport of the thing, and keeps just a safe distance ahead of the hounds and horses.

As the people of Kent county are becoming better acquainted with the cavalry, the membership is growing.

The Centreville affair was but the second public appearance, and in that event it successfully policed the course of point to point races. Just after its organization it made its first public appearance in Chestertown, but its numbers were so small that it attracted but little attention. At Centreville it was a feature of the day.

Mr. Sheen was asked, "Why the cavalry?" He said that he came of a military family. In the wars of America his family had been represented. In the World War Mr. Sheen was an officer, but not a chaplain, in the One Hundred and Ninth United States Field Artillery. He appreciated, he said, the value of the training, and in carrying out his idea each member of the company is given the opportunity to have command of it. He said, further, that he felt that the activities of the cavalry would tend to keep the young men on the farm.

Aberdeen Proving Grounds.

Although Kent Countians constantly hear and feel the reports from big guns at Aberdeen, few have ever visited this proving ground or know anything about it.

The Aberdeen Proving Grounds contain aproximately 40,000 acres, most of which is a wilderness, seldom if ever visited by man. This wilderness is under constant bombardment from the big guns, bombs from large bombing aeroplanes, poisonus gasses and other destructive material used in modern warfare.

Aberdeen is the army reservation for testing and getting important data on the big guns, bombs, smoke screens, poisonous gasses, etc., so that when called into action to defend our country the experiment part will be over.

At a recent demonstration before the newspaper editors of Maryland and Delaware the motor artillery was put in action; the large guns were fired; bombs were dropped from large Martin Bombers; smoke screens were laid from acroplanes, the gas being a product of Edgewood Arsenal; airships and aeroplanes were demonstrated, including parachute jumping; and some of the editors were fortunate enough to be given a ride in the large Martin Bombers.

The whole demonstration proved that the U. S. Army is keeping up to and forging ahead in modern warfare defense methods.

Arrested For Ridgely Fire.

Sheriff Temple has arrested Ernest Blackburn and Harry Howell, charged with burning the Saulsbury Bros., Inc., canning factory at Ridgely on the night of April 24 last. Howard Betson, aged 16, was burned to death fighting the fire. Blackburn, it is alleged, has made a signed confession to the State's attorney of Caroline county, implicating Howell. Blackburn in his confession claimed that there was no intent to fire the canning establishment, but to steal gasoline which was in an outhouse near the factory.
