NEW PLOW INVENTED

Automatic Manless Plow Would Revolutionized Farming, According To Inventor.

Field work upon the farms of the United States may be revolutionized by a manless plow, perfected by Prof. J. B. Davidson, head of the agricultural engineering department of the University of Iowa at Ames. He conceived the idea of the plow and delegated the construction to students who worked under his direction. The first was credited to Darrell B. Lucas, and the second to Edward D. Gordon. The test run of the initial machine suggested some improvements and these were embodied in the second. After months of trial the inventor is convinced of the practicability of the invention.

With no one in sight the plow works its way across the field, turns up long, neat rows of black soil on the college farm. When it reaches the fence it is automatically reversed and starts back across the tract until it reaches the fence upon the opposite side, repeating the operation and requiring no attention except the occasional replenishment of the gasoline tank and the application of lubricating oil.

Professor Davidson says the plowing bill of the United States aggregates $150,000,000 annually. By the general introduction of automatic plows this item, he says, may be cut squarely in two. While the manless plow cannot be utilied upon all farms, as it is built for square or rectangular tracts, and those bounded by a fence, it is believed the manless plow will become popular.

Many semi-automatic agricultural implements have been invented, notably the self-binder, but the plow produced by Professor Davidson is the first entirely automatic, operating independent of human control as long as it is supplied with gasoline.

Must Grow Whiskers

Whiskers, sideburns, mustaches and sombreros are the topics on the Montery Peninsula. In jrejaration for Serra pilgrimage week, to be November 12-19, three cities—Monterey, Pacific Grove and Carmel—now are ruled by proclamations, issued by the Mayor of each, that men must grow facial ornaments or pay theprice.

"Men who do not have mustaches must pay $10 to the city or be confined in jail for a week. Men who cannot raise mustaches must buy a gootee." That is what the proclamation of Mayor William J. Gould, of Pacific Grove, says.

Mayor Benjamin F. Wright, of Monterey, has decreed that all men must start to "cultivate the harvest." Barbers have been duly notified the slogan of Monterey is "alfalfa."

Large Apple Crops in The East And South

The latest reports issued by the United States Department of Agriculture predict a slight decrease in Maryland's fruit crop for this year. This includes apples, peaches, pears and grapes. The same is predicted for the state of Pennsylvania.

Taking the fruit growing sections of the country as a whole, the prediction is for more than the usual crop of fruit with the Eastern and Southern States leading. In the central and Western States the decreases will amount to between 20 and 25 percent.

Total production of apples in the United States this year is expected to be 196,000,000 bushels or almost exactly the same as it was last season. The crop is distinctly better than last year in most of the North Atlantic, South Atlantic, South Central States, but everywhere else is materially smaller than that of last year.

KENT'S BEAUTY SPOTS

Millington Offers Lovers Of Beauty A Rare Chance For Exhiliaration.

Millington is one of Kent's beauty spots. Somewhat off the main lines, where the traffic's ceaseless roar drowns the melody of the lark, the robin and the mockingbird, it has a rare charm that is not to be had anywhere else in this section.

In Millington old things, old customs, old hearts keep green; the years go by along the quiet roads and you can't miss the turn to the village, where one may walk its middle ways without fear where workmen bid you goodnight when they meet you in lanes full of dusk, where men and women do not creep away into houses, but ride and play and laugh and walk abroad for roses and the sunshine, where old folk nourish like babies, where they share the joy of the skylarks and see the way spring treads, where they love sunset and the stars, where they play croquet until every daisy of their hopes closes gladly with the dusk.

At the quite, peaceful town of Millington, which nestles at the head of the serpentine Chester like a queen at the head of a banquet table, life goes on with untold pleasures to the edge of the grave.

High School Transportation

At the time the Board of County Commissioners of Kent County, Maryland, struck the levy for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1925, they reduced the public school budget in a commendable effort to avoid too great an increase in the taxes. Among the reduction made in the budget was the denial to the Board of Education of all money requested for the transportation of high school pupils. During the summer months and early September the school patrons affected by the loss of that transportation appeared before the County Commissioners and requested them to provide the funds necessary for the Board of Education to continue their policy of transporting high school children. Arrangements, therefore, have been made by both boards whereby a sufficient amount of money has been made available for two-thirds of the cost of high school transportation during the balance of the current year. This will necessitate the parents of those high school pupils who are transported paying the other one third of the cost dividing that portion of the cost of any one route equally among the children transported on that route.

An advertisement for bids on the various transportation routes will be found elsewhere in this paper. The bids will be opened at the next meeting of the Board of Education to be held next Tuesday, September 30, 1924, and the busses will be started as early as possible.

DELAWARE STATE FAIR FAILS

Institution Of Long Standing Goes Under

A receiver for the Delaware State Fair has been appointed as the result of the report made at the special meeting of the directors that the total indebtedness is about $61,000.

This being in the nature of a friendly suit it is anticipated the case will be conducted in a manner that will leave as a possibility the continuance of the Fair at Elsmere, as this is the attitude of a number of those who are interested in it despite the hard knock received in the effort to make it successful this year.

Total expenses were $47,900. with the receipts about $23,000, leaving a deficit for this year of $14,000. To this is added outstanding indebtedness of $16,000 and interest on the bonds of $31,000.

The attendance, about 55,000, was several thousand less than last year, but it was pointed out that the receipts at the grandstand were 50 per cent higher than last year as proof that the track and vaudeville features were better and received greater patronage.

Said Persident Charles M. Banks today: "The action of the board of directors was taken solely with the idea of protecting all the creditors equally, without favoritism. Also it was done with the thought that if the people of Wilmington and the rest of Delaware want to continue the Fair this action will accord them the opportunity to reorganize and to raise funds necessary to take the Fair out of the hands of a receiver and to continue it as a factor in the growth and development of the state's agricultural and industrial interests."

Mrs. Jones Calls Meeting of H and C Committee

A general meeting of the Home and Community Committee, of the Maryland Farm Bureau Federation has been called by Mrs. Josiah W. Jones, State Chairman, for Friday, October 3 at the Hotel Rennert, Baltimore.

Mrs. Jones is insistent upon a 100 per cent attendance at this meeting and desires to urge upon every member of the committee the importance of being present to give reports of the activities of this committee so far this year as well as to map out a program of work for the remainder of this year and for next year as well.

The State Office has augmented Mrs. Jones' notice of the meeting with a letter to all county secretaries asking their co-operation in seeing that each county is represented by a member of this important committee. Luncheon will be served at the Hotel during the recess period.

—Announcement was made recently by the War Department that trophies captured in the World War would soon be distributed to the States in the Union. These in turn will be sent to County seats and it likely that before long a German cannon may be placed in the public square.

COOLIDGE BACKS MELLON SCHEME

Would Regard Republican Success in November as "Mandate" to Repeal Present Law.

WOULD FAVOR MILLIONAIRES

President Still Wants Reduction of Surtaxes on Big Incomes, and Opposes Estate Taxes and Publicity of Returns.

Washington, D. C. — Republican success at the polls on November 4 would be regarded by President Coolidge as a "mandate" to substitute the "Mellon plan" of taxation for the present Democratic law and thus deprive small taxpayers of the generous reduction in taxes they now enjoy and instead give most of the benefits to the millionaires and billionaires Mr. Coolidge and his Secretary of the Treasury have frankly favored in the past.

Partisan Republican newspapers, evidently speaking with inspiration from the White House, have repeatedly published the statement that Mr. Coolidge's election and Republican control of Congress will be the signal for a revision of the new Democratic tax law and the enactment in its stead of the Mellon scheme. The President's own language in his statement accompanying his approval of the Garner-Simmons (Democratic) bill is taken to justify the prediction made by Republican newspapers.

Mr. Coolidge declared his opposition to the surtax rates, running to 40 per cent, to the estate tax of 40 per cent., and to publicity for income tax returns, among other provisions of the bill, and asserted that the measure did not "represent a sound and permanent tax policy." In all the objections he raised against the new law, Mr. Coolidge explained, Secretary Mellon concurred with him.

Harvey's Paper Hints Plan

The Washington Post, whose editor in chief is George B. Harvey, is regarded as the most knowing spokesman of the White House on political subjects. This paper on June 4, two days after President Coolidge reluctantly signed the new bill, published a news article in which appeared the following paragraph:

"The statement [sent to Congress by Mr. Coolidge] is accepted as a declaration by the President of an election issue, and in this regard it is considered likely that if a Republican Congress is elected and Mr. Coolidge is returned to the White House, he will call a special session of the new Congress after next March 4."

What President Coolidge and Secretary Mellon demanded of Congress was a reduction of the surtaxes on the incomes of millionaires from a maximum of 50 per cent. to a maximum of only 25 per cent., thus cutting the taxes of those with incomes of $60,000 and more by many thousands a year at the expense of the smaller taxpayers. This is shown by the fact that the "Mellon Plan," if adopted as its author and Mr. Coolidge urged, would have benefited 6109 income taxpayers more than the Democratic bill, while the latter has actually brought substantial relief to 6,656,067 persons more than the Mellon scheme would have benefited.

Scheme President Favors

The reduction of 50 per cent. in the surtaxes on an income of $5,000,000, advocated by President Coolidge and Secretary Mellon, would have meant a saving of $1,300,000 to that lone taxpayer. At the same time, had their plan been adopted, the saving to 1,666 taxpayers with an average income of $3,000 a year each, aggregating $5,000,000, would have been only $25,000. The Mellon scheme with which the President wants Congress to replace the present Democratic law, would have saved more money to a taxpayer with an income of $100,000 a year—and there are upwards of a thousand in this class—than it would have saved to 60 taxpayers whose incomes averaged $10,000 each.

Small taxpayers who are now getting the benefit of tax reductions given to them by the Democrats of Congress have a special interest in defeating President Coolidge and Republican Senators and Representatives at the election in November. The powerful interests which have been attempting to force the Mellon plan on the people will succeed if Mr. Coolidge and a Republican majority in the Senate and the House are chosen. It was only the Democrats, with assistance from certain western Progressives, that prevented the enactment of the Mellon scheme in the recent session of Congress.

These millionaires and billionaires for whom President Coolidge and Secretary Mellon have fought so hard in the last fourteen months could well afford to spend millions to control the elections in November. The saving they could thus obtain through the reduction of their normal and surtaxes at the expense of thousands of smaller taxpayers would make their contributions to Republican success a fine investment.
