THE MAN FOR PRESIDENT

Theodore E. Burton, keynoter of the Republican convention last June, said before the Democratic convention had nominated John W. Davis that Mr. Davis was the best fitted man in the Democratic party for the presidential candidacy.

The thousands who heard Mr. Davis speak recently in Broadway auditorium were convinced, one feels safe in saying, that Mr. Burton did not make his statement broad enough. Mr. Davis has proved in the first two months of this campaign—and his speech here emphasized the truth of this assertion—that he is best fitted of all the candidates to be President.

Previously to his speech or acceptance last August, Mr. Davis had been known through his services as solicitor ambassador to England. He was admitted to be one of the legal minds in the country. But the people at large had had no contacts with him. They knew little, if anything, as to his abilities for political leadership.

All that has been greatly changed. Before the radio had finished broadcasting his Clarksburg speech, the people began to realize that a new leader had been found. This realization has grown, in the east, the west, throughout the country. Wherever Mr. Davis has spoken the people have found him to possess the qualities of heart and mind that make the kind of leader a nation needs.

Whatever doubt, if any, remained in the minds of Buffalonians as to the progress of Mr. Davis's campaign, was removed at least so far as concerns those who heard the Democratic candidate for President last night. They realized the absurdity of Republican claims that the Republicans do not fear the outcome of Mr. Davis's campaign. They realized, as they listened to his sharp thrusts at corruption under the Republican administration, his analysis of our duties in foreign relations and his clear exposition of the principles for which he stands, that here was a leader unafraid to discuss the issues which are to be settled Nov. 4. They realized that John W. Davis, if it is a leader the people desire at Washington, is the man for President.

Appointments to Oyster Police Boats

Conservation Commissioner Swepson Earle has appointed and commissioned Capt. Maurice Edwards Commander of an Auxiliary Oyster Police boat for Chester River. Capt. Edwards assumed charge of the boat Thursday, October 16, 1924, and entered upon his official duties on that date. Capt Whaland, who was reappointed to the captency of the boat known as the Chester River boat does not enter upon duty until Nov. 1. Capt Frank Akers will continue commander of the Police boat Gov. McLane, which position he has held for several years.

AGRICULTURE CLUB BOYS

Again Agricultural Club boys of this state have demonstrated their ability as judges of the fine points of pure bred cattle. At the recent National Dairy Show, held at Milwaukee, the team of three boys representing Maryland, Amos, Holter, of Frederick County, Willis Cissel, of Howard county and Martin Sutton, of Kent county, captured fourth honors in the cattle judging contest in which 20 champion state teams were entered.

The trip was given by the officials of Timonium Fair as a reward to the three boys of the state making the highest scores in the cattle judging contest at the Fair. In the Milwaukee contest, individually, the boys stood as follows: Amos Holter, fourth, Cissell, twelfth and Sutton, twenty-seventh. The record made by the Maryland team was considered highly satisfactory, giving the club boys of this state a consistent five-year record among the leading cattle judging teams of the country.

SPORTS

WASHINGTON LOSES TO CATHOLIC UNIVERSITY—WILL PLAY NAVY IN ANNAPOLIS TODAY

Washington College lost to Catholic University on Saturday by the score of 19 to 6. Long runs scored all of Catholic University's runs. Washington scored its touchdown in the second quarter by an aerial attack. Smooth played a star game for Washington.

Washington College will play the Naval Academy Plebes today at Annapolis.

The Chestertown High School Soccer team is out for State honors. They have a good team and with the new suits they have just bought should be world-beaters.

Today is a big day in National football—perhaps the biggest of the year. Many big teams will know just how strong they are after today.
