LONGING FOR THE SOUTH

By S. E. Kiser

There's a longing, deep and eager, that comes every day to me,
As I toil where rest is not and strife prevails;
If I could I would be splashing where mild warmth is in the sea
And the broad, blue bays are dotted with white sails.

If I might I'd pack my luggage and be off before tonight
For a climate that I presently shall name,
A place where men with money manage often to get tight,
And two pecks of pearls are owned by every dame.

The Palm Beach Palms are waving, and I wish that I were there.
With a green roll big enough to choke a cow,
And absolutely free from all the daily wear-and-tear
That I fear is bringing wrinkles to my brow.

I hear the soft breeze calling where the gay and carless roam,
Where the lady and the correspondent meet,
And I'm weary of strap-hanging on my night'ly journey home,
Though I once considered even that a treat.

I've a longing to be sprawling where the Palm Beach breakers break,
Forgetting Duty's petulant command,
With a lovely lady finding it a constant joy to make
Absurd attempts to bury me in sand.

MEN DIE IN CHESAPEAKE

Eastern Shore Watermen Perish When Yawl Upsets

Capt. Herbert L. Pope, of the schooner Byam, of Oxford, Md., died of exposure in Chesapeake Bay Saturday afternoon and a negro mate was drowned when the schooner's yawlboat upset with the two men.

Captain Pope, who had been in the oyster-packing at Oxford, Md. closed down his place when business became dull and ran his schooner as freighter. He left Oxford Saturday morning bound down the bay for a load of lumber, with the negro as mate and a white man named Brown. While off the Neck District, Dorchester County, the wind became light and Capt. Pope and the negro got in the yawlboat to start the engine and tow the schooner. It is thought that when the engine started the bow was forced above the rope fastening it to the schooner and caused the boat to turn over.

Brown threw life preservers to the men. Captain Pope put his on, but the negro failed to secure his and sank in the icy water.

Capt. Pope was unable to reach the schooner, which having all sails up drifted away, and Brown had no boat in which to go to him.

The schooner was found adrift by Capain Anderson of Deal's Island, while coming to harbor from the oyster bars. He towed the vessel to James Point Harbor. Brown at first could give no account of what had happened but later told what seemed a straight story.

The body of Capain Pope was found about 10 o'clock Sunday by Captain Bromwell, of the Little Choptank river police boat. Captain Pope was about 40 years old. He leaves a widow and several children.

Looking After Oysters

Charges that State officials have "sunk into peaceful slumbers" after unfounded reports of typhoid in oysters had destroyed the oyster industry "in a night," throwing hundreds of workers into distress, were replied to recently by Swepson Earle, State Conservation Commissioner. The charges were contained in a letter sent Governor Ritchie by L. C. Quinn, of Crisfield. At the same time it was learned that Dr. Hugh S. Cumming, surgeongeneral of the Untied States Public Health Service, has sent several inspectors to Chicago and New York to investigate conditions. Maryland was the first State to make a sanitary survey of its oyster fields, Mr. Earle declared. Such a survey, he asserted, is the only real way to protect both the public and oyster packers. This will take until next fall to complete, he said, when certificates of purity will be given by the State Department of Healtth.

KENT FISHERMEN PROTEST

Object to Dumpping Mud From Baltimore Harbor Into Chesapeake and Ruining Fishing Grounds

That the dumping of mud from Baltimore harbor and the Patapsco river into the Chesapeake Bay is spoiling the fishing grounds off Bloody Point and Kent Island, and that such practice should be discontinued in the interest of fishermen, was the nature of a complaint which was laid before Swepson Earle last week by many local watermen. Many residents of both Kent and Queen Anne's counties make their living during the winter by fishing, and any act that would tend to drive fish away from the vicinity of the bay adjacent to their homes, is naturally considered a inimical one.

There are quite a number of watermen living in Rock Hall who make their living by trawl fishing in the vicinity now being affected by the dumping of the harbor mud, and they believe that if the dumping is not stopped it will be the means of destroying the famous winter haunts of the fish and the most productive protion of the bay in which to ply their business.

The fishermen are fearful of the same calamity which has befallen the once famous Swan Point bar, whose oyster were formerly the most sought for and which was one of the most prolific and profitable oystering bars in the Chesapeake Bay, but which during the past four years has practically been abandoned because it is generally believed that the dumping of the mud from the Baltimore harbor smorthered the oyster out and so polluted the waters that the growth of young oysters was seriously affected.

Since the dumping on Swan Point has been discontinued the bar is coming into profit again, and while there has been no general tonging or dredging of the bar there has been sufficient during the past two years to indicate that the bar will again become very profitable.

It is said that Commissioner Earle has agreed to take the matter up with the fishermen and at the same time come to some agreement with the fishermen regarding wholesale trawl fishing, which the commissioner has signified his intention of greatly curtailing, if not discontinuing altogether.

It is claimed by many watermen that trawl net fishing does far more harm to the industry than any other known method, because it not only disturbs the fish in their winter quarters, but takes from the water at this time of the year tons of fish which, if allowed to rest in winter quarters, would furnish the spawn for next year's spring breeding season, which would greatly increase the supply from year to year.

Poultry Notes

Items That Will Interest Our Poultry Raisers Everywhere.

January is here with its cold weather and few of us will be ready for those February youngsters that will win the greater portions of the early fall fair ribbons and fill the egg basket next August, when the old hens are taking their annual molt. The wise poultryman has already mated his pens and should be getting eggs this month that will be fertile. It is very discouraging to fill one's incubator with eggs and find that at the end of seven days, not one germ has started or that one must pull out 50 per cent. clear eggs. If you are careful in mating and watch your flock you can be sure of getting good hatches even in cold weather, provided you have comfortable houses and have given the hens plenty of good feed, along with milk and green stuff. Green stuff is hard to get in December in some climates but something green should be fed even if you have to substitute Alfalfa.

Roosters should be put with hens at least 15 days before the eggs are wanted for setting in order to insure a good fertility.

What truly may be called astonishing progress is being made these days in the poultry field of the United States and Canada—progress so rapid, in fact, that is is difficult to keep abreast of it in the more important phases.

The Bramble Poultry Farm will put out its first hatch of the season on Feb. 2; then one every week thereafter.

The poultry industry is one of the world's greatest industries. In many of the states it is the principal cash crop for the farmers. As an illustration the poultry crop of one state—North Carolina—is greater than all other single crops except that of cotton and tobacco. If the poultry producers and distributors would spend a fraction of one per cent of the money they make on poultry to properly advertise and tell the people of the good quality of eggs—the perfect food—the consumption would be doubled. What we need is better care of the eggs on the farm and from the farm to the consumer, so that we may supply eggs of a good quality to the trade. The total number of all kinds of poultry on farms in the United States on January 1, 1920 amounted to 373,301,959, including 359,537,127 chickens and 13,288,127 other fowls. The total number of fowls on farms on April 15, 1910 was 295,880,190, including 280,340,950 chickens and 15,539,231 other fowls.

Easy Way to Break Severest Cough

No matter how long you have had a persistent, weakening cough—no matter how many remedies you have tried without success—you can usually get relief instantly, and often relieve the entire cough condition in 24 hours, by a very simple method.

The method is based on a remarkable prescription known as Dr. King's New Discovery for Coughs. You simply take one teaspoonful and hold it in your throat for 15 or 20 seconds before swallowing it, without following with water. The prescription has a double action, it not only soothes and heals soreness and irritation, but it quickly loosens and removes the phlegm and congestion which are the direct cause of the coughing. The prompt relief seems almost magical, and the quickness with which the whole cough condition disappears is often simply amazing. There is nothing better for coughs, chest colds, bronchitis, bronchialasthma, hoarseness, and almost every throat irritation. Economical, too, as the dose is only one teaspoonful. On sale at all good druggists. Ask for
