FARM NOTES

Sheep Growers Tour St. Mary's County

Growers of sheep in St. Mary's county recently conducted a tour in that county, which included a number of the largest sheep farms, for the purpose of stimulating interest in that industry.

The tourists included many of the leading farmers and Farm Bureau members of the county together with a delegation of specialists from the University of Maryland. Following the tour, Dr. F. B. Bomberger, of the University and secretary of the Maryland Sheepgrowers Association, who was one of the guests, had this to say with reference to the sheep growing situation in St. Mary's county.

"It is very apparent that it is necessary to have three things to successfully produce early lambs. First the lamb must be born early and, in order that this be made possible, the ewe must be in good condition the previous season and bred early; Second, high class ewes and rams are essential because fat, plump lambs cannot be raised from scrub stuff; Third, they must have feed. On most of the farms in St. Mary's county where early lambs are produced, the ewes are of native grade stuff and the rams either pure bred or high grade individuals of the medium wooled breeds. I think at every place, except one, we saw lambs creeps in use. In most cases the rations for the ewes consisted of ear or shelled corn, corn stover and alfalfa or mixed hay. Generally speaking, lambs were a trifle later and not quite so far ahead as this time last year."

State Roads For Kent

Regarding a recent statement in this paper concerning state roads in Kent, we are carrying an advertisement in this issue to the effect that 1.5 miles of state road will be built from Coleman's Corner and 2.3 miles from Tolchester Beach to the end of the state road completed last year. These roads will be a great convenience to travelers in Kent County.

WASHINGTON COLLEGE

One of a few informal dances to be held on the hill this year was held last Saturday night in the gym. From this has grown the idea of having a little frolic each Saturday morning in the gym. for a few hours. The students are talking this plan strongly but as yet nothing has been done. The pian suggested grows out of a feeling that something is needed to keep the students on the hill week-ends and bring them together socialy more often.

The literary societies are now preparing for the commencement debate. Both had a debate on their program this week.

The fellows are working hard on the athletic field now preparing it for base ball season. A number of loads of clay are being put on the infield. Many interesting contests are expected on this field this spring.

In a few days the college is sending out a number of pencils, to the to the graduates of high schools, with their compliments. The pencils are maroon and black with Washington College, Chestertown, Maryland stamped upon them in gold. This is another step in the vigorous advertising campaign that the college is putting on.
