MARYLAND ASKED TO AID COLLEGE

State Urged To Help Western Maryland College Raise Needed $375,000.

FRIENDS ARE BUSY

On Success Of Campaign Depends Rockefeller Gift Of $125,000 And State Appropriation.

Beginning with the second week in May, the people of Maryland will start the work of raising $375,000 as additional endowment for Western Maryland College in order that the college may benefit by the offer of the Rockefeller Foundation to give $125,000 as an endowment and also obtain a state appropriation of $125,000 for a new building provided the college raises $250,000 for endowment. By raising $375,000 the college will obtain both gift and appropriation.

An official announcement by the officers of the college says:

"The Maryland Legislature has made an appropriation of $125,000 for a Building at Western Maryland College, conditioned on the college raising $250,000 additional endowment. This appropriation is payable July 1, 1927.

"The General Education Board of New York City (the Rockefeller Foundation) announces a conditional gift of $125,000 to Western Maryland College provided the College raises additional endowment to the amount of $375,000, which with their gift means a total additional endowment of $500,000. This condition, if met, will bring the total endowment of the college up to $800,000, and place Western Maryland College in the front rank of American colleges. In other words raising $375,000 secures the state's appropriation of $125,000 and the Rockefeller gift of $125,000, a total of $250,000.

"The Board of Trustees of the College at a meeting held in Baltimore, Maryland, December 9, 1924, gave hearty endorsement to the campaign to raise $375,000 for endowment, to meet the conditions imposed by the State of Maryland and the General Education Board.

"It is desirable that this campaign shall be put on before Commencement of 1925, probably during the month of May.

"Herein is the promise of a new day for Western Maryland College. The 'hopes and fears of all the years' of the remarkable history of this college are met in this challenge to our loyalty and to our faith. An opportunity is now presented where we must think and give in larger terms than ever before. The alumni and friends of other colleges have met their responsibilities in genrous fashion, and it is confidently believed that our alumni and friends will do the same.

"But this cannot be put across unless everybody does his part. The call to the colors will be sounded in the ears of every former student of Western Maryland College. The response will measure their love for the old college and their belief in the ideals for which the college has stood since the day of its founding. And everybody must have a part in the rejoicing that will follow the successful ending of this venture of faith!"

The actual work of raising the fund desired will be undertaken by students, present and former, in this and every other county of the state. One hundred former students have been named as "captains of ten," meaning that each captain will have under him, as a team, nine other students. The captains may also add to their teams such other persons as are interested in the movement to put Western Maryland College "in the front rank of American colleges."

The campaign manger will be Col. Robert J. Gill, of Baltimore, attorney and noted for his splendid services during the war. He will direct the campaign. Meetings of the captains and teams are scheduled for next month in various parts of the state.

GREATLY AIDS HIGH SCHOOLS

Western Maryland College Graduates Add To Teaching Forces.

Of the 1,306 graduates of Western Maryland College, 379 have taken up the work of teaching, according to statistics just made public by the college. One hundred and four have gone into business, 379 have adopted teaching as their profession, 104 persons entered the ministry, 53 took up law as a profession, 39 entered the medical profession, and 288 engaged in the profession of "home maker."

Seals and Tuna Fish Have Hiding Places

There is a mystery surrounding the fur seal which has never been solved. No one has ever been able to discover where they go in winter. No one has yet been able to make a record of their hiding place.

All that is known, says the Minneapolis Tribune, is that on the islands of St. Paul and St. George, in Alaska, the seals begin to appear about the end of April or the first of May and toward the latter part of August or in the first weeks of September they disappear as strangely and mysteriously as they came. In this respect they are not less puzzling to scientists than the huge schools of tuna fish which appear and disappear from the waters of southern California regularly each year.

Tuna fish have been caught, marked and turned loose, with the hope that some of them might be caught in other waters during the winter months, but so far none of them has been captured. A similar method of marking seals would do no good, for they are never seen during the winter months.

Years ago the seals numbered 5,000,000 or more, where today they may be counted only up to four or five hundred thousand. Yet even in the days when they were most numerous, their habit of disappearing suddenly without leaving a trace of their whereabouts and as suddenly reappearing after an absence of several months was just as mysterious as it is today.

Paris Bank Messenger Needs No Armed Guard

The Paris bank messenger wears a cocked hat with an air of dignity. His coat is liberal in cut and you can see the big brass buttons on it glittering in the sunshine quite a long way off. A brass plate over his heart bears a number and under his arm he carries a leather satchel attached to a big chain secured about his waist.

There is an air of prosperity about him. He is of liberal proportions and plants his feet firmly. He inspires confidence and we might trust our fortune to his keeping and still sleep peacefully at night.

We meet him often in the busy morning near the opera pursuing his steadfast way along the crowded pavement. He, least of anyone, is in a hurry. He is picturesque, slow and sure. And that we feel we may confide our treasure to him is due not to the chain of shining steel with which he grapples it, nor his glittering buttons, nor the brazen number on his breast, but he is secure, inviolate because he is fantastic, and treasure walks the streets unguarded save by the fantasy of a glorious cocked hat.—From the Continental Edition of the London Mail.

When Poachers Flourished

As a profession, poaching has fallen off greatly in Great Britain. A hundred years ago the nights between the harvest and hunters' full moons were the nights of the poachers' delight, and there would be a steady flow of game, not killed by shot, to the cellars of dealers in country towns, to the country inns, and to the boxes of such coachmen and guards and country carriers as were willing to do a little business in handling game. A hundred-year-old record shows that no fewer than four-and-fifty poachers were sheltered in Lewes jail at one time. There were poachers in every town and village, hence the threatening notices, "Beware of Mantraps," still often to be seen in British woodlands.

Fires in Forests

It is not practicable to equip forests with lightning rods. No remedy is now in sight for disastrous forest fires due to lightning, such as have occurred on a vast scale in the western states during the last season, says Nature Magazine of Washington. When lightning strikes a tree the ordinary result is to splinter the wood or strip off bark through the sudden generation of steam. In the great majority of cases the tree is not set on fire. Nevertheless the aggregate number of forest fires started by lightning is, in many parts of the country, greater than the number due to all other causes combined.

Paper in Farming

A 50 per cent increase in the pineapple crops of the Hawaiian islands has been accomplished by use of broad strips of brown paper that completely cover the soil around the plants. The paper smothers the weeds, thereby leaving all the nourishment for the plants, which force their way up through the covering. Also, the paper protector conserves the moisture in the soil. The waste fibers of sugar cane, once considered valueless, are used for making the paper. Seventy-five thousand rolls of it at a cost of $200,000 are used yearly to cover the 3,500 acres of pineapple plantations in the islands.

At Last

How often the wild rose has moved its first flame along the skirts of hornbeam hedge or beech thicket, or the honeysuckle begun to unwind her pale horns of ivory and moongold, and yet across the furthest elm-tops to the south the magic summons of the cuckoo has been still unheard in the windless amber dawn, or when, as in the poet's tale, the myriad little hands of twilight pull the shadows out of the leaves and weave the evening dark. But when the cry of the plover is abroad we know that our welcome spring is come at last.—Fiona Macleod, in "Where the Forest Murmurs."

Keep the Mud Out

Little feet—and big ones, too—have a habit of forgetting the doormat.

The housewife appreciates the trimness and handiness of concrete sidewalks and also clothes poles connected by concrete paths. These and stationary tubs of concrete are a big help on washday.

The little jobs that mean so much in convenience are small in cost, for through the development of the rotary kiln, Atlas Portland Cement is actually cheaper today than it was thirty years ago.
