Pointer for Those Who Seek Knowledge

Once upon a time, according to an old story, a young man went to Socrates, the Greek philosopher, and said: "Sire, I come to you in search of knowledge. I have heard much about you, and have come a long way to find you. Will you not tell me how I can gain knowledge?"

Socrates said, "Follow me." The youth followed Socrates to a body of water and was surprised to see him wade into it up to his waist. He followed him and Socrates grasped him by the arm and head and thrust his head under the water. He held him there until it seemed the youth would surely perish. He dragged him to the shore and waited for the youth to catch his breath; then said: "My boy, what did you most desire when I held your head under the water?"

The youth replied: "Air."

Socrates said: "Go your way and remember that when you want knowledge as much as you wanted air when you were under water, you will get it."—Forbes Magazine.

One Place Where Rat Is Not Thought Pest

A deity whose name is Ganesha is worshiped by the Hindus.

Because Ganesha is always pictured riding on a rat or attended by one, the rat receives part of the homage directed to the god. For this reason many rats live in state in the temple at Deshnoke, India, where there is an old and interesting shrine erected to this mythological god.

Pilgrims prostrate themselves before a group of rats, which have no idea in life beyond that of eating everything available and keeping a safe distance from cats and hawks. But they represent the rat god, Ganesha, and the temple in which they live is sacred on account of their presence. It is even called "the Rat Temple."

According to Hindu mythology, Ganesha was the lord of the Ganas, who were a group of inferior deities. Ganesha removes obstacles. He is propitiated at the beginning of any, undertaking. He is particularly endowed with wisdom and judgment.

Scholars on Strike

Strikes are not a modern trouble. One of the earliest and oddest strikes on record is that which took place in Oxford, England, in 1209, when, in consequence of a peculiarly outrageous aggression of town upon gown, masters and scholars to the number of 3,000 "downed tools" and retired in high dudgeon to adjacent centers of learning. The schools were closed, the city was laid under an interdict, and the trouble only ended five years later—in the complete humiliation of the erring burgesses, who were compelled to do public penance and to accord large privileges to the university. When the offended clerks finally condescended to return, these "blacklegs," who had continued to lecture in defiance of the will of the majority were punished by three years' suspension.

How Cannon Are Spiked

In former times when the old-fashioned type of cannon was used the guns were disabled by driving an iron spike into the opening at the breech through which fire was communicated to the powder. This was called "spiking" the cannon. It was done when it was necessary to leave the guns behind, to prevent their immediate use by the enemy. Such disablement was usually only temporary. The phrase, however, is retained in modern military usage. Spiking a cannon nowadays means breaking or carrying away part of the breech mechanism, making it impossible to use the gun without considerable repair.—Exhange.

Beggars' Trade Union

In China one of the most formidable trade unions is that of the beggars. Begging in that country is a recognized profession, and there is a properly organized guild of beggars in most districts.

Each guild has its own president and officers, and the members pay an annual subscription equaling about $4.00 in our money. The officials of the guilds wield such power that they enjoy the protection of the magistracy.

So far there has been no strike on the part of the members of this union, which is undoubtedly the quaintest organization of its kind in the world.

Do Not Force Plants

If a plant has been growing thriftily for some time and then begins to go back it probably needs a rest, and no amount of forcing will do any permanent good. During the resting period a plant is better if left entirely alone in a dry, cool cellar. It will of its own accord and without any attention of any kind begin to put out new green shoots. When these new shoots show themselves the plant should be given a thorough watering, a repotting if necessary, and brought up into its place in the sun. After it is growing well it may be given fertilizer.

"The Mills of the Gods"

This is an old Greek aphorism taken from the "Oracula Sibyllina." The original, literally translated, reads as follows: "The mills of the gods grind slowly, but they grind small." Longfellow, in translating it, inserted the word "exceeding" and made it read: "The mills of the gods grind slowly, but they grind exceeding small." The same thought is found in Plutarch and other ancient writers.—Exchange.

The Home And Family Life

Miss Grace E. Frysinger, Extension Home Economist, United States Department of Agriculture, in an address before American Farm Bureau Federation in Chicago, said.

"The American farm home is admittedly the local point of better American life. The home has usually been thought of as the place where boys and girls are prepared for the task of going out in the world to win success. The home must be recognized by all as the ultimate objective and that the professions, trades and industries exist only as a means to provide desirable homes and family life."

What a beautiful floor!

The visitor is at once impressed with the beauty of a Bruce Oak Floor, and as she is escorted by her gratified hostess through all the rooms, her delight increases as she sees how the atmosphere of her friend's home is enriched by the mellow expanse beneath their feet—dignity and the warmth of hospitality in the living room, good cheer in the dining room and good taste throughout.

There is no floor that can compare with a Bruce Oak Floor; it has character, beauty, and it will last for all time.

If you lack Oak Floors in your present home, there is a special thickness made to lay over the old worn floor.

We will be glad of an opportunity of telling you more about Oak Floors as related to your individual requirements.
