Plant Pests Exact Heavy Price for Inpatience

Impatience to make foreign plants quickly available by imparting them in quantities into the United States has resulted in the introduction of plant dseases and pests responsible for enomous annual losses to farmers, gardeners, forest owners, and to the entire country losses which will take only a few years to equal our war debt. Such drains on the resources of the United States continue in spite of heavy expenditures for control by the States, the Federal Government, and individuals.

Just now there is being expressed a wave of objection to the restrictions and safeguards on the entry of plants enforced by the United States Department of Agriculture for the purpose of excluding new and additional plant enemies. This appears to be based on a failure to appreciate the risk from the freer entry of such plants and an unwillingness to wait the few years necessary or them to become available under the safer methods of introduction authorized by the department.

The price we are paying for such impatience in the past can be best illustrated by a few examples.

The disappearance of the American chestnut is the price we are paying in one instance. The chestnut bark disease might have been excluded if some importer had been willing to wait the few years necessary to grow the Japanese chestnut from seed for the purpose of securing representative trees to complete, perhaps, a collection of the chestnuts of the world.

Impatience to have at the shortest notice the beautiful effect of a fringe of Japanese flowering cherries along our riversides, driveways and walks led, during the period of stimulated enthusiasm for this glorious tree, to its importation in such size and form as to ntroduce the Oriental fruit worm. This pest, now firmly established in half a dozen eastern States and with wide foothold in the South and Middle West, promises to be one of the most serious of our fruit enemies, attacking particularly the peach and other stone fruits, but also the apple, pear, etc. No efficient remedy for this pest has been found, and it now threatens losses which may soon total millions of dollars. annually. Willingness to have spent a few years in developing such trees by the safer horticultural methods of propagation from buds, or cuttings, would have closed the door of opportunity to this pest.

Yielding to the factors of haste and cheapness introduced a disease into Florida and the Gulf States which has already cost some $20,000,000 in Federal and State expenditures and in the value of orchards and nurseries burned to the ground in an effort to eradicate the disease, and this work is not finished.

The Department of Agriculture, 35 years ago, improted some young date plants from Northern Africa. These proved to be infested with two date scale insects then unknown to the specialists. An effort was made, thought to have been successful at the time, to clean these plants by repeated washings and sprayings. Nevertheless they were the means of introducing two important date pests into California and Arizona.

The blister rust, which now threatens our white pine forests both of the United States and the great mountain regione of Northwest, was introduced through the unwillingness of our own people to take the trouble and accept the additional cost of producing this native tree from seed. Unless controlled, this disease may repeat for our white pines the sad story of the chestnut disease.

May I close this report by expressing the hope that the good friends of Washington College may in the coming year talk up the college even more than they have done in the past, May Providence put it into the hearts of men and women financially able to help Washington College raise the $200,000 which it must have by July 1, 1927 in order to claim the 100,000 banus which the State has promised.

As a final and very common illustration, the department recently was compelled to refuse a request for authority to import, for the embellishment of a large estate, a collection of fifty-year-old Rhododendrons. Very naturally, under the Limitations of ordinary human life, the owner did not want to wait 50 years to secure plants of similar size and magnificance. But he failed to realize that the importation of these plants in huge tubs would mean bringing into the United States many tons of soil containing possibly many hibernating European pests, such, for example, as the Japanese beetle, the alfalfa weevil, and various cutworms and wireworms. Some of these pests already introduced are now taking a heavy toll of our farm crops.

BACKACHE IS A WARNING!

Chestertown Folks are Learning How to Heed It.

Are you miserable with an aching back? Do you get up lame and stiff; drag through the day feeling tired, weak and depressed? Then you should help your kidneys. Backache is often the first sign of failing kidneys. Urinary troubles quickly follow. Neglected, there's danger of gravel, dropsy or fatal Bright's disease. Don't wait for serious kidney sickness! Use Doan's Pills, a stimulant diuretic to the kidneys, before it is too late. This Chestertown resident tells an experience:

James E. Newton, prop. of tailor shop R. F. D. No. 2, says: "A cold settled in my kidneys and caused a dull, nagging ache in my back. Mornings my back was lame and stiff and when I stooped to do any lifting, such a sharp pain went through my kidneys, it was a task to straighten up again. Doan's Pills which I bought at Toulson's Drug Store soon rid me of the backache and I haven't had any return of the trouble."

Kent Farmers Fear Hail

Hail storms in this section are the dread of the Kent farmers at this time of the year, and many of the wheat growers in the county, fearing a repetition of tht serious damage caused by hail storms of this and former years in various sections of the county, are resorting to protecting their crops against hail by a new insurance policy which is being offered by local representaitives of insuranct companies. The bitter experience of a number of farmers who lost their entire crop in hail storms of previous years has caused them to seek the protection offered by the insurance companies. The most recent damage done in the county was the storm of Monday night which damaged the farm of Mr. John C. Wood and others on Eastern Neck Island. Hail has fallen at different times in Kent this season and some little damage has been dbne to crops.
