TODAY MARKS the anniversary of the birthday of the nation. On this occasion it is appropriate to stop and consider what this anniversary betokens. It brings to our minds the fact that within less than one hundred and fifty years the United States has risen from a group of isolated and practically foreign colonies to the richest, most powerful and most democratic country of the world. We can justly feel proud of the growth of our nation and can congratulate ourselves that it is our good fortune to be citizens of such a country. When we consider the conditions in European countries, torn by jealosies, stricken with poverty, and burdened by reactionary traditions we can celebrate the birthday of our own country with many feelings of gratitude. In time of war with flags flying, bands playing and the patriotic fervor at its height, love of country and patriotism are the order of the day. In peace times it takes such occasions as today to bring to our recollection the greatness of our nation and to impress upon us just what place the Fourth of July occupies in the history of our country. Everyone should strive to make this day a memorable one in the year's calendar and the closing of the business places of the town is a proper move on the part of our citizens. We can not do too much in the way of celebrating the birthday of the greatest nation of all times.

"Meanest Man" Found in Kansas Community

"If the governor was to offer a prize for the meanest man in 17 states," indignantly declared the landlord of the Petunia tavern, "half the population, and mebby all of 'em, would p'int right at Ira Sours in one voice and say, 'There he stands, governor.'

"Why, dod-blast him, he attends every home talent dramatic performance that is given in the hall here, and right in the most moving parts, when the kinfolks of our best young people are setting in solemn silence while their sons and daughters are uttering words of heroic and pathetic mien, as it were, he laughs out loud, in the most rye-bald tone imaginable. Recently when my nephew, whose Adam's apple works up and down quite excitedly when he is interested in what he is saying, was telling the audience that his father was slain in battle-uh, his mother died of a broken heart-uh, and his home was laid desolate-uh, fired by the torch of the invader-uh, Ira Sours, confound him to thunder, actually laid back and blaw-haw-hawed as if it was youmerous!"—Kansas City Times.

Towns Have Similar and Some Odd Names

Colne sounds rather distinctive as a name for a town, yet there are ten Colnes in England. There also are 14 Burtons, and 37 Burtons with additions. There are 23 Prestons and 38 others with affixes. Jericho appears six times on English ordnance maps; Paradise, five times, and Nineveh, Mt. Zion, Mt. Ararat, and Mt. Ephraim three times each.

The name Washington is used by more than 200 cities, towns, villages and hamlets in America, yet a letter addressed to Washington without any other designation will go to Washington, D. C., while one addressed to Preston, will be delivered to the Lancashire cotton town, according to London Tit-Bits.

Names consisting of a single letter are not uncommon. France has a river and Sweden a town named A, while there is a River Y in Holland, and one of the bays of the Zuyder Zee bears the same name. Two Chinese towns are Y and O, while in Normandy there is a town named O.

Movement of Glaciers

The Swiss Alpine club in 1912 measured the largest of the Swiss glaciers, "L'Aletsch." It had retreated ten feet, following on nearly 60 feet in 1911 and rather more than that in 1910. The Rhine glacier had gone back 34 feet, in addition to the 70 feet lost in the previous year. Nearly all the smaller glaciers, out of the 52 surveyed by the Alpine club, show some retreat and the larger loss appears to be that of the Palu glacier, near Bermina, which is losing regularly 70 feet a year.

Real Rain in India

During the monsoon season in India, which lasts for four months, the rain falls almost constantly. It is necessary to keep a "tokri," which is a sort of basket with charcoal fire beneath, burning, and clothes laid out over it all the time in order to have anything dry enough to put on for a change. Heavier clothes are soldered up in tin containers with moth balls, so that the damp air does not get to them. The monsoon is, of course, a blessing to parts of India, for whenever the rains fail there is no famine.
