THE STATEMENT by the Government that the corn crop this year will exceed the yield of last year by 650,000,000 bushels is of interest to our local farmers as this big production of corn will probably affect the price in the fall. On every hand is heard various suggestions as to the best methods of improving farming conditions. Some advocate the curtailing of production by planting smaller crops, others that the labor problem is the real problem before the farmers. It is certainly true that the farm problem is the greatest question before this country today. Any prosperity which is not based on success to the farmer, is of a temporary character and in our opinion there can be no real increase in the business interests or in the general prosperity of the county until something is done to solve the farm problem.

Feeding Grain Now Aids Fall Dairy Profit

Prepare dairy cattle now for profitable fall and winter milk production. This is the advice given to cow owners in a feature editorial in the current issue of "The Larro Dairyman."

"To produce milk consistently and in large quantity, over a period of time," the editorial states, "cows must be brought to the best condition and kept there, just as a successful athlete must be conditioned by steady training.

"There is no theory about this," says the writer. "All men who succeed with cows know that they cannot afford continously to let them get out of condition, and then bring back their milk flow. It costs too much money and does not get results.

"Producing milk is an all-year business. It is a profitable business, too, if business methods are employed—if cows are kept in good condition and producing well every day in the year, regardless of seasons."

"The Larro Dairyman" issues a significant warning against permitting the loss of condition that occurs in the summer time, when farmers are most likely to rely entirely upon pasture without realizing that such a course is more than likely to involve a heavy loss of milk and money, not only now, but in fall and winter.

In commenting on this fact, the editorial says. "Men who are most successful, feed their cows some grain every day in the year. Even when grass is at its best, they feed more lightly, but they give the amount to each cop that she will eat readily. Then, as the season advances, the amount of feed is increased as the grass dries and becomes short, hard and unpalatable.

"These men know that there are times when they might get just as much milk from their cows if they withheld the grain, and thereby added to their immediate profits an amount equal to the cost of the feed.

" uBt they also realize that this immediate profit would be small, and to accept it would mean to mortgage the future, sacrifice cow condition, and lose larger profits when fall and winter come.

"Feed now for milk next winter, remembering that 'now' is every day from spring to fall and from fall to spring."

Kent's Wheat Crop

Finest In Years Being Threshed—Counties Agents' New Methods

The finest wheat crop in years is being threshed in Kent, but the price has taken a decided drop.

Four years ago the Experiment Station introduced into Kent county a variety of wheat, known as the Mammoth Red, and it is to this that the greatest attention has been paid in order that its yield, as compared with that of other varieties may be tested.

Present indications are that the Mammoth Red will far outstrip all other varieties. Especially good fields according to Mr. Derrick, have been observed on the farms of Joseph Edwards and Harry Holt, at Massey; Benjamin F. Rash, in Worton; Josiah Massey, Thomas H. Bryan and Walter Walbert, near here.

None of these crops has been threshed yet, but the size of the heads the quality of the grain and the quantity of straw give evidence of a fine yield.

The agent has also conducted experiments in top dressing wheat with 100 pounds of nitrate of soda to the acre on the farms of Julian Jones, near town, and Walter Hill, at Kennedyville, for the purpose of determining the value of the nitrate in the production, as compared with the usual method of fertilizing.

Comparative samples of the top-dressed plat and the ordinary tillage have been sent to the experiment station, where the respective yields will be ascertained and the growers of the county will be informed of the results within a month.

Judging from the character of the crops on the farms, Mr. Derrick advises the growers to use the improved Mammoth Red variety in their fall seeding, because he believes it will produce the best yield from year to year. The first crop was thrashed yesterday by Walter Sparks, on the Melvin farm, in Morgnec, who got an average yield of 31½ bushels per acre, the largest the farm ever produced. The crop here is expected to be a bumper one.
