THE AMERICAN PRESS ASSOCIATION

IN THE DEATH of William Jennings Bryan, one of the most out-standing figures in America's public life has passed. There are few men in the history of the country who have made their influence felt in as many and various branches of life as has Mr. Bryan. He first appeared as a politician and newspaper man and going to the Democratic National Convention in 1896, practically unknown and unheralded, by the sheer force of his own personality and oratory, captured the Democratic Nomination for the Presidency. After his third defeat for the Presidency his influence began to be felt in things not purely of a political nature. Although himself a Colonel in the Spanish American War, in later life he was probably the leader of the peace movement in this country. He was always an ardent prohibitionist and an ardent foe of the theory of evolution. He was essentially a fighter and the public in general admires a man who fights for his convictions. Although we cannot all agree with the theories and causes which he espoused, and history has shown that his economic programs were in many cases impractical, yet he had a firm belief in all the programs which he endorsed and fought for those causes in the open, with a clear deck and without regard to friend or foe. He of course played to the public, was a lover of publicity, and a firm believer in the power of the press and did not hesitate to use these influences to the fullest extent in furthering his beliefs. He had many enimies and many friends, which is always a sign of greatness in any man. He will live in history with the great men of this country and although that history will show that some of his causes are impractical and purely theoretical, he will always be admired for his loyalty to his beliefs. He will be greatly missed by the American public. His death is characteristic of his life and it is a fitting end for such a man to die while fighting for his convictions.

ROAD OPENED

Opening of Millington-Sudlersville Road Big Event

Approximately three thousand people attended the events at Millington and Sudlersville marking the opening of the road between these two towns and the final link in one of the most important boulevards on the Atlantic Coast. The first event on the program was the base ball game.

The parade of automobiles and floats reached Sudlersville about 4.15 p. m. Numerous automobiles gayly decoraten and many floats representing state-road activities, various business enterprises, and historical events made the parade a very inspiring one.

Kent county's contribution to the pageant was a beautiful float representing the old wooden bridge which spans the Chester River at Chestertown, which now forms an important link in the State highway system from Northern cities to Cape Charles. The model of the bridge was 10 feet long and was made by Edward Jones, of Chestertown. The town of Millington was represented by a float carrying many young ladies of that town. Various other parts of the State Road system were represented by floats showing much thought and skilled workmanship. In the pageant were floats representing Maryland's seafood industries sent by the State Conservation Commission; one representing the State Roads Commission and showing the progress of highway construction; one representing Queen Anne, of England, for whom the county is named, and another sent by the County Commissioners of Queen Anne County, representing Governor Ganson the first governor of Maryland elected by popular vote and a native of Queen Anne's County.

After the arrival of the parade at Sudlersville the crowd was addressed by Senator Dudley Ree, of Queen Anne's County; by Governor Ritchie and by Mr. John N. Mackall, Chairman of the State Roads Commission. Due to heavy rain storm which unfortunately interfered with the speaking program, Congressman Goldsborough was unable to deliver his address.

At 5.30 p. m. a banquet for sixty guests was served in Cox' Memorial Hall at Sudlersville. The celebration closed with a dance. The whole affair showed careful and pains-taking preparation on the part of the people of Millington and Sudlersville and evidenced the public spirit for which these towns are known in this vicinity.
