Washington College.

The many friends of Washington College are eager to know what the attendance prospects are for next year. The figures given below will indicate the present situation, i.s. at the midsummer time. While there should be considerable additions as a result of the work of the several summer weeks remaining before college opens

One of the surest signs of the progress which Washington College is making is its vital appeal to prospective Freshmen. Although the representatives of the college have been in the field scarcely more than a month, they have secured on the dotted line the names of 57 high school seniors who expect to enter Washington College next fall.

Taking time by the forelock, the college this year began its campaign for increased attendance even before the last Christmas vacation. The college class in Salesmanship, under the guidance of Prof. George G. Snyder of the Department of Commerce, made an extensive study this term of the field and the possibilities of Washington College in the matter of students. Prof. Snyder and his assistants worked out a careful organized plan to attack the problem of increased attendance in a scientific way.

As a result of this study, every high school on the Eastern Shore of Maryland had been visited by the college representatives and nearly all the high school seniors interviewed before June. In addition, Messrs. Jarman and Nuttle had visited some high schools in other parts of Maryland. This preliminary scrimmaging has turned the thoughts of a larger number of Maryland boys and girls than ever before to Washington College.

It is the plan of Prof. Snyder to cover intensively, however, not only the nine counties of Maryland east of the Chesapeake, but to work also on the Western Shore, in southeast Pennsylvania, and southwest Jersey. The visits of the college representatives have been and are being followed up by a carefully thought-out news-letter and printers ink campaign. Hundreds of letters have gone out from the President's office, carrying the message of Washington College to the largest number of boys and girls probably ever reached by the college's publicity matter.

Of the 57 registrations already secured, 14 are from Chestertown, four from the Western Shore, eight from outside of Maryland, and 31 from the Eastern Shore. All in all 79% of the applicants so far received are from Eastern Shore boys and girls. Looked at in another way, the figures give still another result. Of the 57 registrations, 13 are girls and 44 are boys. Thus it appears likely that there will be a large proportion of girls in this year's Freshman class.

Prof. Snyder now plans to work the Western Shore and out of the State territory during the month of August.

—Mr. Hans Hanson of Queen Annes will have a most attractive home when completed. Duyer Bros. are building the residence on the corner, next to Mr. Walter Elburn.
