Peach Growing Fades

A Metropolitan paper recently printed the folloying:

"The Eastern Shore of Maryland is keepisg its peach crop at home this year to make peach brandy. This explains the virtual non-existence of shipments to the North and West."

The truth of the motter is that the non-existence of peach shipments may be traced directly and entirely to the fact that there are no peaches. Unfortunately the San Jose scale and yellows, combined with half a dozen other equally destructive agencies, arrived before the days of spraying, and when spraying came the orchards were gone.

Some day they may come back and we certainly hope they will, but for the present both peaches and peach brandy are numbered among the past.

—On Monday, August 26, Mr. J. D. Maxwell gave his employees what he called a "Harvest Dinner". Fifteen were present at the table including two guests and all enjoyed as fine a dinner as could have been prepared There was fried chicken in abundance and all the delecies of the season including Water Mellon, Ice Cream and Mother's Home Made Pie for desert.

—Chestertown's horse-shoe pitchers defeated Still Pond Saturday 8 games out of the 9 played. Still Pond played the locals close in every game. Still Pond won Wednesday evening three out of five played.
