

SPORTS OF A WEEK

WASHINGTON PRIMED FOR BIG GAME TO-DAY---UNIVERSITY OF MAAYLAND TOO STRONG

Football's steady march upgrade to new heights of competition and popular interest promises to go forward with increased momentum in the season which has its main kick-offs tomorrow in various sections of the country. The campaign of 1924, startling in many aspects, set new marks all along the line, but 1925 is expected to see most of these records displaced. With new and gigantic stadiums springing up throughout the college world, this fall's battles should shatter all previous attendance standards. The steady growth of public interest in the game will be spurred on in the coming weeks by an unusual array of brilliant conflicts, east and west with more than two score intersectional frays—a record number in itself— adding to the traditional list of attractions.

The Washington College football team will journey to Chester, Pa., today, and will face their well-known rivals, the Pennsylvania Military Academy. A large crowd will accompany them. This should be one of the best games of the season. It always is a good game. The Chestertown team is primed for this contest and expects to win.

Speaking of the Washington College University of Maryland football game Saturday, the sports writer of the "Baltimore Sun," said:

"At times little fault could be found with Washingtons exhibition. The trouble with the Eastern Shoremen's work was that it was spotty. They lacked consistensy.

On occasion the defense was quite capable. At other times it was out of step entirely. The brighest spot in Washington's performance was the defensive play of Conant, right tackle.

If the rest of the Chestertown team had fought, tackled, used their heads and performed the rudimentary acts of defense as he did the contest would have ended in a scoreless deadlock.

There was something lacking in Washington's attack. What interference the Eastern Shoremen displayed was impotent. The forwards failed to make openings for the backs the running plays were neither hard to fathom nor difficult to stop.

Russell substituting at quarter, did pretty well. He handled what resources he had at his command to the best advantage, perhaps, even though he failed to "cross" Troxell and the rest of the Maryland secondary defense when Troxell was sent in to stop the passing over the center of the line that had proven too much for Linkous.

Jack Dempsey and Harry Wills came to terms late Tuesday afternoon for a heavyweight championship fight in Michigan City in the fall of 1926 and left immediately for Niles, Mich., just over the Indiana State line, to sign articles.

Coach Kibler's Washington College foothall team is quickly recovering from the effects of its hard game with the University of Maryland; the members of the team came out of the game in good physical condition and with the exception of a little stiffness are in excellent shape. Coach Kibler has solved a great problem in developing a substitute kicker for Cavanaugh in Smoot. Smoot's punting in last week's game averaged very closely around the 50-yard mark and his work was very welcome to the followers of Washington, who realized the passing of a very noticeable weakness. Coach Kibler has been and will be working hard with his squad during this week to overcome the faults which loomed up in the Maryland game. By the end of this week Washington will be in real shape for the game to-day with the Pennsylvania Military College, of Chester, Pa., in Chester, and will be determined to win their first game at the expense of the Cadets.

Pitching, it is generally conceded is about 70 per cent of the world's series battle, for which reason the rival boards of baseball strategy in Pittsburg and Washington are concentrating intently on methods of shuffling the twirling deck in the classic that starts October 7, in the Pirates' den. The Senators' problem is simpler than that of their rivals. Bucky Harris is relying upon his two great right handers, the veteran Stanley Coveleskie and Walter Johnson, to carry his main burden, whereas Bill McKechnie and Fred Clarke, co-directors of Pirate tactics, have a half dozen experienced men.

One of the best known of the veteran observers some time ago named has for his all-time backfield the following cast: Eckersall, quarter; Mahan and Heston, halfbacks; Thorpe, fullback.

University of Maryland knew too much football for Washington College on Saturday and W. C. was defeated 13 to 0.

Maryland scored near the close of the first period when Russell, of Washington fumbled on the 20 yard line. Early in the second period, Maryland was again placed in a position to tally when Smoot's punt flivered and went only five yeards. This break was also turned into points by Maryland. From this point on the game was nip and tuck, with Washington threatening to score with an overhead attack near the close of the game.

HOG CHOLERY WARNING

FARMERS ARE URGED TO TAKE EVERY PRECAUTION TO COMBAT DISEASE

Since the first of the year twenty-one (21) cases of hog cholera have been found in Kent County. Fifteen of these cases were investigated during September. At the present time conditions are very serious near Galena, Black, and Locust Grove. One case just found at Meltitota.

Farmers located in the danger zone should have their hogs vaccinated promptly. Don't wait until hogs are sick before having them treated, as this means unnecessary losses.

The practice of feeding kitchen slops seems to be a general one on farms where cholera has been found. This practice is responsible for about 85% of the outbreaks of hog cholera in this state. Where kitchen slops are fed and pork is purchased, frequently small scraps of the rind or bones get into the slop bucket row. Sometimes this pork comes from hogs that are killed in the first stage of cholera, and that is why these scraps or trimmings, when fed raw, can and do cause cases of hog cholera.

Sick hogs should be kept up and when they die should be promptly buried or burned to comply with the State law. At one farm in the infected area, two hogs that died of cholera were found unburied. This man's neighbors complained bitterly of his neglect. This practice is a dangerous one, as unburied car casses give the dogs and buzzards an excellent chance to spread a disease to other farms.

Farmers are therefore urged to have their hogs vaccinated if they are exposed to cholera. If your hogs are sick, call in your Veterinarian promptly. All cases of sick hogs should be reported withput delay to County Agent Derrick at Chestertown.
