HEALTH GNOME VISITS THE SCHOOL FOR THE DEAF

The Health Gnome blew into the State Department of Health, one breezy day, last week whisked off his little green cap—making himself visible and settled down for conversation. "I have some information for you," he said, "maybe you know it, maybe you don't—but here it is, and I'd like you to help me get it over to some other people.

"Do you know that there is a place in Maryland where they teach deaf children to speak? I don't mean children who are just a little hard of hearing. But the boys and girls who are totally deaf and who have never learned to talk.

"I found out about it "he went on," through a pal of mine who went there little fellow up in the mountains, a husky little chap full of fun and ...gs a button, but he had never ... to talk and he can't hear a ... When the other six year-olds ...nt to school, he had to stay home, because he couldn't understand what was said to him.

"The Public Health Nurse who lives across the road from him, knew about the school for the deaf and made arrangements for him to go there. I've just been to see him. He's been there a year, and say! He can talk! He can read words out of a book, too; and he can say them just like any other child. Of course he can't hear he never will be able to hear, but he is learning to understand nearly everything that is said to him because he has been taught to watch the lips of people as they speak to him.

"Shall I tell you where the school is? "He drew out a tiny notbook and read the address carefully. "It is," he said, "The Maryland School for the Deaf, at Frederick. They have children there from six years old up through high school age, and they teach them all of the things the hearing boys and girls are taught. Sixteen little six year-olds started in together, last year when my pal went. I could tell you a lot more about the interesting things they do and are taught in the school, but if you want to know all about it, just write to the principal , Mr. Ignatius Bjorlee.

NATIONAL COMMANDER ELECTED
