GAME WARDEN CAUSES ARREST

IN TURN A WARRANT IS SWORN OUT AGAINST HIM FOR IMPROPERLY OPERATING CAR

District Deputy Game Warden John Anderson, of Cecilton, upon stopping in Elkton for a short time after returning from the Susquehanna "Flats," famous ducking grounds at the mouth of the Susquehanna river, where he caused the arrest of several persons for alleged violation of the ducking laws of Maryland, was arrested on a warrant sworn out by a North East man.

Anderson is charged with operating an automobie while he was under the influence of liquor. Anderson was taken before Magistrate George W. Owens, of North East, where he denied the allegations and insisted upon a court trial but this was denied him and a fine of $250 was imposed.

An appeal was taken at once and bond furnished.

TO BOOST SHORE TOWNS

The drive to boost the counties of the Eastern Shore of Maryland, the two counties of the Eastern Shore of Virginia and Delaware waslaunched under the most favorable circumstances. Each county is to raise $10,000 to put in the pool, and suggestions were received from experts who advised the spending of $5,000 in one year for advertising. The experts state that newspaper advertising was the best kind of publicity. The other $5,000 to be used by the home office in a follow up campaign.

HOW MOVIES EDUCATE PEOPLE

Moving pictures have done much toward educating people of rural communities.

In practically every city, town and hamlet, the inhabitants are familiar with Mary Pickford, the Talmadge and Gish sisters, Charlie Chaplin, Rudolph Valentino, and other stars. Bill Hart is a hero to every plow boy. Village movies are the chief diversion for miles around.

SHIPPED MANY FINE TURKEYS

Last week presented busy scenes at the home of H. Stockton Startt, when thousands of pounds of fine young turkeys and guineas were purchased for city buyers from the farmers of this section at 45 cents a pound dry picked which is an advance of 7 cents over the price last year, and close to the prices being paid for squab turkeys, thousands of which have been bought in Chestertown and Millington during the past month at the fancy prices of 50 and 60 cents a pound.

Mr. Startt states that scarcely in the history of the industry in the county has there geen such a large crop of turkeys in Kent county.

VIOLATED THE DUCKING LAW

On warrants sworn out by District Deputy Game Warden John Anderson, of Cecil county, Harry L. Harvey, Earnest Norman and George Ulary, all of North East, have been arrested and held for court, having waived a hearing, charged with violating the ducking laws governing the Susquehanna flats. It is alleged that the accused anchored their boats on the flats, prior to 4.30 o'clock in the morning or as the gunners term it, took "sets" before the legal hour. A similar case was decided in the Harford county court last year, when Edward Beck, of near Perryville, was tried and found guilty.

KILLED ON CHESTERTOWN ST.

Chestertown had a sad accident on Monday morning when Harriett Lindsay, five-year-old daughter of Samuel Lindsay, colored, was instantly killed while attempting to cross the street at the intersection of Maple avenue and Cross street, when she was struck by one of the busses of the Shore Transit Shore driven by Richard Schauber. The child and her sister started to cross the road just as the bus was nearing the corner, en route from Centreville. The chauffeur swerved his car almost into a ditch to avoid hitting the child, who ran back against the bus, the rear wheel of which threw her to the ground, crushing her skull. The child was taken to a store nearby and Dr. Harry L. Dodd, coroner, summoned. After examining a number of witnesses to the accident, he exonerated the driver of the bus.

WYE POND IS RESTORED

Wye Mill pond is again in existence. The dam has been restored and the rain fall of recent weeks has caused a considerable head of water to come into the point. Mr. Blakeslee built a new dam entirely of earth and it has been pronounced capable of holding the water all out and was satisfied that the pond had been thoroughly restored as it was before the washout last July. He intends at once to get a supply of game fish, such as inhabited the old pond and so far as outward appearances are concerned, the pond is just as it was for many years. It was the heavy rain storm in July last that caused such an overflow of water that the dam was carried away and the water from it wrecked the railroad bridge and carried with it all the fish in the pond. A few weeks later grass began to grow in the bottom of the pond.

DENIES PHOSPHOROUS KILLS DUCKS

Ducks that died recently on the Susquehanna flats from eating phosphorus fed in the phosphorus-covered area because a gun, fired automatically at two minute intervals to frighten them away failed to function one day last week. E. Lee Compte, State Game Warden, made this explanation Monday. He said fifty-two dead ducks had been found and asserted that he did not believe more than one hundred in all had died from eating phosphorous. The phosphorus is dropped from airplanes in smoke screen practice. The grains which do not explode sink to the bottom of the river. There the ducks picked up the grains last week in feeding while the gun, mounted on a barge to frighten the game away, was out of service. In accordonce with an agreement made with War Department officials, phosphorus no longer is being dropped into water less than ten feet deep, Mr. Le Compte said.

SPORTING EVENTS OF THE WEEK

Washington Ends Season With Victory--Basketball Next in Sportlight---Yale Plays Up to Form---Other Notes of the Gridiron and Sport Realm.

Washington College played perhaps the best football of the season on Saturday and, before a large crowd at Reading, Pa., defeated the Schuylkill College team by the score of 20-12. Poor umpiring is said to have marred the game.

Washington's line was exceptionally strong and they held the upper hand throughout the entire contest. Galvin and Negri starred for Washington.

Washington scored in the first, second and fourth quarters, while the Schuylkill team registered in the second and fourth periods.

Negri, Smoot and Carroll scored Washington's touchdowns, while Cavanaugh scored two points by goals after touchdowns.

The football season, which closed with Saturday's game, has been a most unsuccessful one, compared with other years. In the very first part of the season, Reiger, star end, was laid up with a broken hand. Following this, a series of unfortunate accidents have kept Washington's team incapacitated throughout the entire year. With no reserve strength to fall back upon, Coach Kibler has been kept in a dilemma throughout the season. However, Washington has not been overwhelmed in any single game, in spite of the fact that they have played Navy, Lafayette and some of the very best teams of the entire country. Every team has been forced to extend itself to win from Washington. Next year a somewhat easier schedule has been arranged. We think this is the proper thing to do and feel assured that Washington, playing throughout the year against teams of its own calibre, will make a better showing throughout the season.

The next sport to hold the center of the sportlight of this section is basketball. Washington will have Carroll and Dumschott, forwards; Fiore and McGrann, guards; the center position has not yet been definitely decided upon. Washington has several men to fill this place. Carrington, Galvin, and a host of others will supply remarkable reserve strength for Washington. A great season on the basketball floor is predicted.

Yale played its "usual" game on Saturday against Harvard and was ble to tie a far inferior team by scoring nothing. It was great work on Yale's part, having the ball time after time within striking distance of Harvard's only to lose it on "pure dumb" playing, and failing to take advantage of opportunities that would be first-grade lessons for small-college teams. When one thinks of how this second-rate Yale-Harvard-Princeton combination once dominated football, and were considered the last word whenever football was mentioned, and then looks at the facts since then, and sees how they have been beaten to pieces by teams that were once considered their inferiors in all branches of human endeavor, it cause a snicker of amusement to be echoed whereever thoughtful and fairminded people still live.

The football schedule of the Washington College team for next year is as follows:

September 25—Maryland, at College Park.

October 2—Penn Military Academy, at West Chester, Pa.

October 9—Pending.

October 16—Loyola, at Baltimore.

October 23—Blue Ridge, at Chestertown.

November 6—Western Maryland at home.

November 13—St. Joseph's at Philadelphia.

November 20—Mount St. Mary's at Emmittsburg.

The athletic council of Washington College has determined to expand the scope of sports at the institution and has consented to the organization of freshman soccer and basketball teams as a regular part of the college athletic program. Schedules are now being arranged for these two sports, and the first basketball game will be played by the freshman team against a state prep or high school team as a preiminary to the opening varsity game of the season on December 11.

The coaching of the freshman quintet as well as the soccer team, will be under the direct supervision and instruction of Coach J. Thomas Kibler. William Schnauffer, '26, a former high school soccer star, has been elected to coach the soccer squad and will direct all games against Maryland prep and high school teams.

JAILED ON A SERIOUS CHARGE

Charged with breaking into the pool parlor of Wilbur Walls, Church Hill, the other night, Louis J. Kline, of near Wilmington, is in Centreville Jail and will be held for the action of the May term of Court unless he is able to provide bail of $400. He is alleged to have pried open a back window and affected an entrance. Given a hearing before Justice James E. Anderson, he was held for court. Wilbur Walls, Gilbert Everett and Alton Coppage were passing in front of the building late Saturday night and heard someone inside. They investigated and found Kline. The accused man states that he did not force open the window but merely entered the building to sleep for the night.

It is alleged that neither Anderson or State Game Warden LeCompte, under whose instructions Anderson was acting, had any right to cause the arrest of persons for crossing the imaginary line of the Susquehanna Flats before 5 a. m.

Before all phases of the case are settled it promises to involve both the county and State game authorities Anderson alleges that his arrest was the outgrowth of his activities in causing arrest of alleged violators of the ducking laws governing the flats.

THE PUBLIC HEALTH NURSE AND CHILD HYGIENE

HOW SHE AIDS PEOPLE IN THE COMMUNITY WHERE THE RESIDES

Asked to outline the duties of the Public Haith Nurses in Maryland in caring for mothers and young children, Miss C. Ethel Monroe, the State Advisory Nurse, turned to a circular from the Bureau of Child Hygiene that was lying on her desk and quoted "The Bureau of Child Hygiene of the State Department of Health was organized to help Maryland mothers and children keep well, because many mothers die unnecessarily from some complication of childbirth; many babies and young children die each year from preventable diseases, and many children enter school each year handicapped by some physicial defect that could have been prevented or corrected. The Bureau works with and through the Local Health Officer and the Public Health Nurse."

"The Public Health Nurse, Miss Monroe continued," usually gives a large share of her time to activities in furtherance of these aims of the Bureau of Child Hygiene. To help prevent complications of child birth, the nurse visits every expectant mother who is referred to her. She urges her to place herself under the supervision of her physician very early in the parenatal period, and she helps her make the necessary preparations for her confinement. She also advises in regard to the outfit for the baby.

"Owing to extended territory that has to be covered by each nurse and to the variety of duties of the Public Health Nurses, it is impossible for them to gve nursing care to the mother during her confinement or to do the daily bedside nursing following the arrival of the baby. No phase of the nurse's work is more important than the help she is able to give the mother-to-be, and it is hoped that each year more and more of this can be done.

"In a number of counties, the nurse receives regularly from the Local Registrars, the names of the new born babies, so that she may visit each mother and help and advise her in the care of the young baby, if the family physician requests it.

Under the direction of the Deputy State Health Officer, the Public Health Nurse arranges for the 'Well Baby Conferences,' and the child health conferences that are held at regular intervals in each county, and assists the examining physician. These conferences are for well babies, as sick babies are supposed to be already under the care of a physician. Children brought to the conferences who are found to be in need of special care are referred to their family physician. After the conferences, the nurse visits the parents of the children that need such follow-up care and offers her assistance in getting the corrective work done.

"In her visits in the homes, the Public Health Nurse can render a further service to young mothers, and incidentaly to the entire community by showing the parents how to follow the doctor's directions in his efforts to prevent the spread of communicable disease and particularly the so called children's diseases. It is a common thing for a nurse to hear a mother say 'Johnny has the measles and I am letting all the children play in his room so that they can all have it at once and have it over.' All wrong, of course. But the nurse often has to use all her powers of persuasion to make the mothers realize that it is not necessary for all children to have these diseases if proper precautions are taken to prevent their spread.

"The duties of the Public Health Nurse include in addition to those already outlined, the supervision and instruction of the midwives.

"In the field of Child Hygiene as in all other phases of her work, the Public Health Nurse finds much to do along health education lines, holding classes for mothers, organizing little mothers clubs, giving talks and distributing literature. In her Child Hyiere program, the nurse finds some of her most constructive work."

DEER LOOSE ON THE SHORE

One year ago a fine young deer escaped from the State Game Preserve at Hickory Ridge, near Newark, Worcester County. It completely disappeared and was thought to have been killed by dogs or in some other way. Last week Deputy Game Warden Charles E. Hill was notified that the deer had recently been captured near Chincoteague Inlet, and was in the possession of a man who was willing to surrender it to the Maryland authorities as he had been informed it was the property of Maryland. Mr. Hill and Dr. Charles Law, who is a member of the State Game Protective Society, went to Virginia and secured the deer, now a handsome buck weighing over 200 pounds. They carried it to Cropper's Neck, Thursday of this week and released it. Two of its mates are also in the vicinity of Cropper's Neck.

WASHINGTON GRADE "A" COLLEGE.

Good Has Been Realized After Faculty Striving for Several Years

The goal for which the authorities and faculty of Washington College have been striving for the past three years will be realized on November 27, when the Association of Colleges and Preparatory Schools for the Middle States and Maryland assembles in New York to confirm the action of the Commission on Institutions of Higher Education, which voted unanimously this week to place Washington on a par with other colleges in the state and nation by making it a Grade A institution.

For the past three years President Paul Emerson Titsworth and Dean J. S. William Jones, with the cooperation of the college authorities, have been working hard for this goal, but not until Monday, when Miss Bahnie Wedekind, recently appointed the first full-time librarian of the college, assumed her duties, was the final step accomplished.

The appointment of Miss Wedekind were made possible through the generosity of a Chestertown family.

President Titsworth attended a meeting of the Philadelphia Chapter of the College Alumni Association in Philadelphia and there made the first public announcement of the election of the college to the higher grade. The commission makes a number of requirements necessary for a college to become Grade A. Chief among these are a faculty in which at least seven of its members hold the degree of doctor of philosophy or its equivalent, an anunal income of $25,000 independent of the tuition of students, an enrollment of one hundred students or more, a library of a given number of volumes and a full-time librarian.

Each of these requirements had been met with the exception of a full-time librarian, and the management of the college had been fearful of being able to make the grade in this respect.

Upon coming to Washington College as its head, Dr. Titsworth has realized the great handicap to the college in being denied the privilege and prestige of a Grade A institution, and he and Dean Jones, who has spent the best years of his sucessful connection with the institution in an effort to accomplish the desired attainment, set about to make sure that before the close of the present year the college would be placed in the higher grade.

All the past summer when a strenuous canvass for new students was being made in several States contiguous to Maryland, the solicitors were confronted with the query, "Is Washington College a Grade A College?" and the fact that it was not proved embarrassing and resulted in the loss of not a few prospects.

STATE OF MARYLAND PREPARS FOR WINTER.

Eighty Snow Plows Ready For Use to Keep Highways Open to Public

The State of Maryland Road Force is preparing for winter.

One giant rotary snow plow.

Eighty snow plows of the ordinary type.

Twelve miles of snow fences.

This is the equipment the State Roads Commission has mobilized to repulce the Snon King upon his animal invasion from the North.

It is the biggest anti snow line-up the State Roads Commission has ever assembled. The big rotary plow will make its debut in bucking the drifts in the Western Maryland mountains. Eleven ordinary snow plows have been added to the commission's snowfighting equipment this year.

John N. Mackall, chairman of the commission, says:

"We are in better position to fight the snow this year than ever before. We feel we can meet every emergency as it arises."

The great rotary plow which will makes its initial onslaught against the anticipated snows this winter is mounted on a ten-ton caterpillar motortruck. It will clear a path tyelve feet wide through drifts fifteen to twenty feet high.

The rotary plow will be used in Western Maryland in the highlands where the drifts are worst. Distribution of the ordinary plows will be as follows:

Ten Eastern Shore; sixteen in the territory west of Frederick; seventeen Southern Maryland,including Washington boulevard and the vicinity of Washington; sixteen in Frederick, Howard, Carroll and Montgomery counties; twenty-one in Baltimore, Harford and Anne Arundel counties from Annapolis north.

The snow fences are used in the mountains. They are erected along the roads in anticipation of the prevailing northwest storms. When the storms come from this direction the fences turn the drifts back into the fields. Occasionally a storm comes from other directions and the fences do not work so well.

WM. T. DIXON DEAD

Mr. William T. Dixon, one of the best known and most highly respected citizens of Kent county was found dead at his residence at Green Point Farm, ten miles from Chestertown on Wednesday morning, Nov. 25th, the result of a bullet wound in his temple, believed to have been self-inflicted. Mr. Dixon's family occupies a prominent position in the social life of the state and he was well known both on the Eastern Shore and in Baltimore City. He was very much interested in agriculture and his beautiful home at Green Point is an example of an up-to-date farm. He always was interested in any movement for the betterment of the community. He was fond of horses and largely due to his efforts as chairman, the Kent Horse Show recently held here proved a wonderful success.

Mr. Dixon's death was a distinct shock to the community and to the many friends he has made during his residence in this county. He added much to the social life of the community and his death is a loss which will be greatly felt. He was kind hearted, generous and sympathetic to any one in distress and his many acts of kindness are known only to those who benefited thereby. The deceased was 34 years of age and although he never engaged in the practice of law, he wasa graduate of the U. of M Law School and a member of the Maryland bar. He is survived by a wife, Mrs. Lillie Crisfield Dixon and three children, William T. Dixon, Jr., Elizabeth White Dixon, also by a mother, Mrs. Elizabeth White Dixon, six sisters and one brother. Funeral services were conducted at the home on Thursday at 2 p. m. by Rev. Dr. S. S. Hepbron and interment in Green Mount Cemetery, Baltimore on Friday Nov. 27, 1925. C. L. Dodd, undertaker.

TO REMODEL FIRE HOUSE

IMPROVEMENTS WILL BE MADE WHICH WILL GREATLY INCREASE ITS EFFICIENCY

The fire house of the Chestertown Volunteer Fire Co., will be remodeled A committee, composed of W. G. Smyth, chairman; Barber Bartley, secy.; Lee Gill, of the house committee, Arlington L. Sparks, of the executive board and Fred S. Russell, fire chief, decided on a program according to which the entire lower floor now occupied by fire apparatus and the office of the Town Commissioners and Water Board, be given over entirely to fire equipment and that suitable quarters be provided the Commissioners on the second floor of the building. The commissioners have accepted the proposition.

The plans will be carried forward at once, the upper floor of the building will be entirely remodeled. Sleeping quarters will be supplied for the night fire force; recreation rooms and a kitchenette will be installed and a general meeting room for the company added to the improved building. Additional equipment such as coats, gloves, etc., will be provided.

FIRE AT SANDY BOTTOM

Fire destroyed the old St. Paul's Rectory at Sandy Bottom on Wednesday evening at about eight o'clock. This house was occupied by Mr. William H. Lee and family. Mr. Lee built a fire in the kitchen stove, thinking his family was home, and came to Chestertown. It is believed the stove pipe became overheated, causing the fire. The Chestertown Fire Co went to the scene of the fire and rendered valuable aid in preventing the spread of the fire.
