"BALTIMORE" BURNS AT ROCK HALL

One of Rock Hall's Bay Shore Ferry Boats Destroyed By Fire on Wednesday Evening.

The "Baltimore," one of the Rock Hall—Bay Shore Ferry boats, belonging to the Baltimore and Eastern Shore Ferry Line, Inc., was destroyed by fire on Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock while at her wharf at Gratitude, about two miles from Rock Hall. When it was found impossible to extinguish the fire, the blazing boat was cut adrift from the wharf.

At the same time, the steamer "Easteren Shore." was tied up at the same wharf, but was saved by being backed out into the harbor, out of reach of the flames.

The Chestertown Fire Co., which had been called to the scene, saved the pier and warehouse of the ferry company.

O. L. Tunis, manager of the ferry company, said the burned boat was valued at $150,000 and was insured for $70,000.

Because of ice and fog conditions both boats had been tied up at Gratitude for three days. It had been planned to resume the regular service Thursday.

When the fire was discovered, no one was upon the "Baltimore." and a burst of flame from the dock of the boat was the first indication of the blaze. Mr. W. Reybold Wilson, who was near the wharf, was the first to see the blaze and he immediately notified Mr. Frank Jester, watchman. Mr. F. Edward Clothier, assistant engineer on the boat, who resides nearby was also summoned, and all rendered what ever aid possible.

The "Baltimore," acording to Mr Tunis, was a better boat than the "Eastern Shore." It formerly was the Maine, a Forty-second street ferry boat in New York harbor. It was purchased by the present owners five years ago. renamed and virtually rebuilt at a Locust Point shipyard. Only recently it had been repainted.

WHY WE SHOULD DRINK PLENTY OF WATER

There are types of difficult digestion that are markedly improved by the simple addition of one or two extra glasses of water at each meal, and this is one of the best times to include a considerable part of the day's liquid. Water at mealtimes may perhaps be tabboo for certain over-fat types, who are trying to lose in weight, although the evidence to prove the real value of this ommission of water has never been very convincing to me. For some disorders such as types of heart trouble and high blood-pressure, it is necessary to cut down water at all times. There are not normal cases, however, and belong under the doctor's jurisdiction.

There is one limitation that should be placed on water at meal-times. It should never be used as a stream to stomach. Reasonable chewing of food before it is swallowed seems to be of decided advantage to the digestive apparatus of the human being. If short cuts, such as washed-down chunks, are resorted to there is apt to be difficulty.

The value of drinking water is by no means limited to its beneficial effect. It is in the truest sense of the word a cleansing agent in that it helps to carry along the digestive tract fragments of food, and it stimulates the peristaltic action of the digestive tract. That is why, after the digestive tract has rested overnight, one, two or more glasses of water before breakfast are so beneficial is helping to prevent constipation. A little salt or some lemon-juice added to the water retards its passage, seems to hold it in the stomach and intestine, rather than permit it to go off rapidly to the blood stream, increases its stimulus to peristalsis and thus increases its value in ridding the intestine of its waste. To drink water in normal abundance helps to keep food wastes from putrefying in the intestine.—From The Delineator for December.
