NEW FARM POWER PLANT

In presenting the new Model 750 Automatic Delco-Light, the company has eliminated the use of storage batteries and added new features to the generator which greatly simplify its operation. The result is a plant which can be installed for several hundred dollars less than the battery equipped model of approximately the same capacity.

With installation of this new model, electric light and power is available at the turn of a switch. The generating unit is started automatically whenever a light or power switch is turned on and continues to operate until the switch is turned off, when the plant stops. The generating unit furnishes the current direct to the lights or motor equipment.

When the last light is turned off, the plant stops automatically. The plant of course, is self cranking, current for starting being supplied by a small automobile-type battery.

The new Model 750 Automatic Delco-Light plant was an output of 750 watts, sufficient to handle two one-fourth horse power motors at the same time, with a reserve of 200 watts for lights, if they are needed. Mr. George W. Baldwin is the local dealer.

SHORE COLLEGE SHOWS EFFICIENT ADMINISTRATION

INVESTIGATOR REPORTS SMOOTHLY RUNNING MACHINE

In this day and generation of "efficienry plus" and especially in this land where, on every hand, human effort of every name and kind is being highly organized, which means highly simplified, it is interesting to note that the art of giving is being reduced to a scientific, which means to an effective, basis. This tendency to cultivate efficiency to the Nth. degree is manifsted clearly in an effort now being made by public spirited and far sighted persons, donors of wealth great and small, to underwrite worthy educational causes in ways that best "hit the spot." Of course folks will always give cash to such purpose. For instance, in a recent interview, Dr. Albertus Perry, field vice-president of Washington College in Chestertown, stated that it is not an unusual procedure for the sum of $1500 to be donated to the Eastern Shore college. The latest outright gift of that sort was made, he says, a short time ago. Such a donation is useful either on the endowment fund or on the annual budget, according to the wish of the donor. And, thea, hundreds of people are pledging on a five year basis—payable annually, semi-annually or quarterly. Washington College, it is said, encourages this form of giving because it guarantees a certain income over a period of years, to the college. But the most popular form of contribution to a cause is the annuity. This is the best kind of investment, with the safest returns, and is being favored not only by colleges but by large religious denominations as well. High dividends, it is said, are secured. Semi-annual payments of annuity provide the largest income, consistent with safety. At the death of the annuitant the principal goes, according to the donor's wish, either to a designated or undersigned fund. The investment gift is safe. The property, plant and good name of the college are behind it. The semi-annual remittances will be paid as long as the annuitant lives. Relief from investment anxieties and care is assured, according to the Washington College official. Purchasers of annuities are released from further worries about reinvestment of funds, idle money, the passing of dividends or liability of loss from unsound investments. Money will work for the honor as long as he lives and will, in turn, accomplish his desires after death. $100 and upward may thus be invested in cash, real estate or approved bonds and stocks. The investment is not taxable; it saves the commission of an agent and provides a regular, fixed and sure income during the life of the annuitant and eventually will become a part of the endowment fund of the college. there to be a monument to the donor which will serve humanity forever. If there are many applications for annuities of educational institution will carry more than it can safely handle. Many colleges have a rule not to accept annuities in excess of 20% of their property. In the case of Washington College all applications must be passed upon by the Board of Visitors and Governors. This procedure protects the investor in all cases. "To my knowledge," declared Dr. Perry, "at least three persons have made contributions to Washington College through large provisions in their wills. This is another manner of giving to a college. My argument for this method would be that it makes it possible for one's money to live and work in the interest of others, especially in the interest of young people who are worthy of financial help."

In the 71 banks of the Eastern Shore there is $30,000,000 in savings accounts, it is said by banking authorities.

In Kent county alone there are 6000 people who have $3,336,000 in savings acounts in the banks. hat means an average of $561 to an idividual. "Some provision should be made in the wills of those persons, "said Dr. Perry," for Washington College." The county, it is declared, is sufficiently wealthy to afford an opportunity for each of these persons to make a small provision in his will for the school which is itself a feeder for Kent county. Kent students, it is further maintained, may secure an education at Washington College at remarably small cost.

"This stored up wealth may not only be safeguarded, as it is at present," concluded the Shore college official. "but it may be protected against the uncertainties of the future by investing it in a living, growing and immortal educational organism— a college which is developing and nurturing the future citizenship of the Eastern Shore.
