CANDIDATE FOR SHERIFF

At the request of a number of friends I hereby announce myself as a candidate for Sheriff of Kent County, subject to the Democratic Primaries in September.

CHARLES L. GILL

COMMUNICATED

Messrs. Editors:

Will you permit me space in your valuable paper to discuss what I believe to be a misconception of the various aligments in the present political campaign. It has been repeatedly stated during the progress of the contest for the control of the party machinery in this county that the present alignment is the greatest mixup ever known in the county, and that the rank and file of the Democratic party scarcely knows "Where it is at," or Who's Who so far as party organization is concerned. Much of this uncertainty is due I think to a failure on the part of the great mass of the voters to understand the reasons underlying the present alignment, taking it for granted that it is because of dissatisfaction with former political conditions in the county. I do not think this is true. I am convinced that the underlying cause for "the mixup" dates back to the United States Senatorial primaries of several years ago during the lifetime of Senator Wm. W. Beck, who with Harrison W. Vickers, were the recognized leaders of the Organization forces in the county, and when Senator Bruce, Wm. I. Norris, and David J. Lewis were the opposing candidates. It will be remembered that Senator Beck, Mr. Vickers, and Senator Copper, as well as other conservative leaders in the county espoused the cause of Senator Bruce while Mr. S. Scott Beck, a candidate for State Senator in the approaching primaries, broke away from the leadership of Senator Beck, and supported Wm. I. Norris, the recognized wet candidate in the contest, while other followers of Senator Beck and Mr. Vickers broke from their leadership and supported David J. Lewis, the avowed dry candidate for the United States Senate, among whom were Fred G. Usilton, a recognized temperance leader in the county, Charles L. Dodd, and former Senator Wm. F. Russell. It will also be remembered that up to that time Mr. S. Scott Beck was not considered a leader among the Senator Beck and Vickers forces; he was simply a follower, who at that time refused to follow the lead of the conservation element of the party and sought to build up a wet following in the county for his champion, Wm. I. Norris. From that day to the beginning of the present campaign there was a well defined line of cleavage among what was formerly the Organization forces, and there is no wonder that there is an apparent "mixup" in the alignment which has grown ont of that memorable campaign. But a close study of the situation as it relates to that senatorial contest reveals some interesting facts. It is not surprising to see friends of the late Senator Wm. W. Beck fighting his opponent, Mr. S. Scott Beck, in the present campaign, Senator Beck's friends in the county representing the conservative element of the party, simply refuse to follow the lead of the man who broke away from his chief three years ago and who sought to build up an organization composed of elements entirely at variance with the principles for which Senator Beck fought during his distinguished career in the Maryland Senate. Senator Beck's friends throughout the county have not changed their political alignment. They are still fighting the contest which he waged while living, and that is the reason why men of the type of Leonard Wilson, in the first district, Harrison W. Vickers, James T. Dixon, and his son, James T. Dixon, Jr., Robert Moffett, J. Waters Russell, W. Frazier Russell, Jr., Vernon Barnett in the Fourth District, Wm. E. Brown, in the Seventh District, and Robert A. Shallcross, and other influential Democrats in the Fifty District and other sections of the county are today allied with Senator W. B. Copper and his friends in the county, all of whom were behind Senator Beck's candidate, Senator Bruce in the memorable senatorial contest which literally tore THE Organization forces to pieces, leaving nothing else to be done but that the friends of the late Senator Beck and of Senator Copper should remain in absolute control of the Regular County Organization. Senator Beck's friends have not changed their attitudes. They are where they have stood in County Politics for years. Nor has Mr. S. Scott Beck changed his political alignment in the present contest. He is using the same wet forces in the present contest that were at his command in the senatorial contest, and he is at the head of a radical element in the party which is seeking not only the nomination of its candidates in the coming primaries, but which is also striving for control of the party machinery, thereby unhorsing the friends of the late Senator Beck and of Senator Copper, who we are told upon the most reliable authority, would have had the backing of Senator Beck in the present contest for the State Senate had he lived. The most surprising and at the same time interesting phase of the present contest is that those followers of Senator Beck who broke away from his leadership three years ago and supported David J. Lewis, the avowed dry candidate in that contest, are at present supporting Mr. Scott Beck, the leader of the wet forces in that contest, for just what reason is seems difficult to discern, because he was never a recognized leader of the organization forces in the county nor has he ever espoused the principles for which they stand in any public political contest. A careful study of the persent situation seems to indicate clearly that the forces in the county headed by Senator Copper have by far the better claim to being THE Organization in the county because of the fact that the great bulk of the Senator Beck real leaders in the county are wholeheartedly supporting the candidacy of Senator Copper and his running mates, while Mr. Scott Beck, is seeking to build up an opposing organization in the county which in the main is opposed to the principles for which the real county organization has stood for years. I think, Mr. Editor, that the present "Mixup" is surely the result of conditions fostered by the senatorial contest of three years ago, and it looks very much like the present struggle for control is one between the conservative forces led by Senator Copper, and the radical forces at whose head is Mr. S. Scott Beck.

Very truly yours,
A Regular Organization Democrat.

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT

Whereas, it has seemed well to Him, who is the author of life, to summon from our midst our treasurer, Mrs. W. Bradford Copper, and

Whereas, the nobility of character the fidelity to duty, the deep interest in all that pertained to the uplift of humanity, endeared Mrs. Copper to all who had the privilege of her friendship, the members of the "Town Relief" desire to pay this loving tribute to her memory in these resolutions:

Resolved—We recognize in the death of this noble woman an irreparable loss, not only to our membership, but to the other charitable organizations, the Church and the community in general.

Our Society has lost another charter member, one who was actively prominent in its organization, and for the entire fifteen years of its existence was its treasurer and was always present at its meetings and interested in every effort for the alleviation of suffering and distress.

The Church has lost a most valued member whose unblemished life was an exemplification of true religious spirit and consistent christian character; one whose constant endeavor was to emulate her Master in the uplift of humanity and to advance her Masters cause; one whose impressions for goodness and Heaven will ever remain her truest memorial.

Resolved—That we tender our loving and heartfelt sympathy to the sorrow stricken husband, sister and brother of our departed member and commend them for Consolation to "Him who doeth All things for the best," and whose chastisements are dealt by a loving and merciful hand.

Resolved further that a copy of these Resolutions be sent to the family, a copy placed upon the minutes, and that they be published in the county papers.

MRS. G. F. CLARK,
MISS DAISY O. BARNES.

EIGHT-MILE BEACH BOULEVARD

Governor Robert P. Robinson, of Delaware, at a meeting of the Rehoboth Chamber of Commerce, on May 14th, last, made the first official public announcement relative to proposed plans for an ocean boulevard to extend from Lewis, Del., along the Atlantic coastline, to Chincoteague Island, Va., a distance of nearly eighty miles. Governor Robinson spoke purely from the point of Delaware's interest and outlined only tentative plans.

Today three States, Delaware, Maryland and Virginia, are actively engaged in serious study of this project, with local committees of various civic organizations in the area affected giving their aid and support. There is every indication that the proposal will become a definite issue within a comparatively short time.

The boulevard as proposed constitutes what is believed will be the longest all-beach boulevard in the country, outside of Florida.

GUARANTORS MEET

The Kent County guarantors of the Swarthmore Chautauqua met last Friday night at the Kent County Savings Bank. Dr. Paul M. Pearson, head of the Swarthmore Association addressed the meeting. He stated that deficits this year were only 30 per cent. of those of last year. Chairman W. R. Huey of the Chestertown guarantors will name committees in a few days. The ticket selling committee, will begin work at once.

FOUR HUNDRED PA. FARMERS VISIT KENT

Spend Night at Washington College---Welcomed by Chamber of Commerce and Rotary Club

Traveling in eighty-five automobiles, four hundred farmers, wives and children, from Franklin county, Pa., visited Kent county Thursday of this week, and spent the night at Washington College.

All of the buildings of the College were thrown open to the visitors, the four domitories, gymnasium, and William Smith Hall, and the athletic field was used for parking space. These up-to-date Pennsylvania farmers carried their own bedding and food and only required coffee, ice cream, etc., which was furnished by a committee of the Chestertown Rotary Club, through Gill Bros.

After supper, a meeting was held in the auditorium of William Smith Hall at which time they were welcomed by Mr. Marian deK Smith, Jr., treasurer of Kent County Chamber of Commerce. Dr. Paul E. Titsworth and Mr. Carl H. Monsees, of the Research Department of the Del-Mar-Va Eastern Shore Association, made short addresses. Three of the visitors gave short talks, asked questions and expressed their opinion of Kent farmland. Special note was made of the high thorn hedges along the roads, which were not only unsightly but obstructed the view of the country.

At 7 a. m., yesterday, Friday morning, the tourists left for Queen Annes county, where they will be welcomed at Centreville by the Queen Anne's Chamber of Commerce.

WATCH THE PASTURES

SOCRCE GREAT INCOME TO FARMERS SHOULD RECEIVE EVERY ATTENTION

Kent's cattle are always a source of income and should receive every attention.

Special care should be used in watching pastures at this season of the year, if dairymen do not want to run the risk of seriously injuring milk production in the months to come.

When dry weather comes, it is natural for dairymen to hope the drought is only temporary, and to try to weather their cows through without putting them on a regular daily grain ration.

But the fact remains that in practically every section these drouths last long enough to dry up pasture to a point where it is practically useless as feed. Under such circumstances dairymen who rely entirely on grass for their cattle are running a danger of serious loss in milk production later.

A camel can go for days without water, and evendosen't have to eat regularly to do its day's work. But a camel is not requred to produce from 25 to 50 lbs. of milk per day, as a cow is.

To continue to yield milk in such quantity, a cow needs a full and regular op nourishing feed every day in the year. She cannot get it from August pasture without a supplementary ration of grain. You can't make a camel out of a cow; nor should you ask a cow to graze all day on land that is nearly as barren as the dessert.

Observation by Professor Wilbur J. Fraser, of the University of Illinois, showed that over a period of four summers, from May to November, there was a total of only three weeks during which an acre and a half of pasture was sufficient to support one cow. And in two of those summers there were 27 weeks when 30 acres of pasture land were required to yield feed enough for one cow. It is impossible for any cow to graze over that amount of land, even if the ground were available.

Yet this is the time when an extra effort should be pade to get cows in good condition for winter. Naturally, dairymen want the highest milk production when milk prices are highest. Cows that are allowed to get out of condition because of a short ration will not regain their lost milk production before the next lacation, and usually will not get back to capacity even then.

If your pastures are badly burned at this time, take no chances—but keep your herd on a full grain retion. If dry weather has not seriously affected your pasture land, you should in any event supplement it with a grain ration, as the right feding schedule now will start building the kind of condition you want and require for the biggest production in fall and winter.

HOG CHOLERA DECREASING

There were only 4 outbreaks of Hog Cholera in the state during the month of July, one of which was in Kent county. This shows a marked decrease over preceding years and it looks as if the Maryland plan of prevention is being adopted and proving a success.

Three of the four outbreaks were caused by feeding hogs garbage that contained pork scraps, the origin of the other is unknown.

It is apparent that pork scraps in garbage is the cause of nine out of ten outbreaks and the Department of Agriculture is continually advising against the feeding of pork. If this precaution will be taken by Kent farmers, Hog Cholera may be eliminated It is with a trial.

BEWARE OF TYPHOID FEVER

"Here are ten ways by which you may safeguard yourself and your family against typhoid, an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure.

"1. Boil your drinking water unless you are sure that the supply is pure.

"2. Always wash your hands before preparing food for the table.

"3. Always wash your hands before eating.

"4. Wash all vegetables that are to be eaten raw and all fruits, in water that has been boiled and cooled.

"5. Keep food covered.

"6. Use covered garbage pans.

"7. Screen the house from flies.

"8. If there is a case of typhoid in your household or in the neighborhood, keep out of the sickroom unless you are nursing the patient. Show your neighborliness in other ways.

"9. Ask your doctor to vaccinate you against typhoid. The State Department of Health will furnish the vaccine free of charge. All you will need to pay is the doctor's fee. Three treatments, a week apart will protect you for this season and the next."

A story is told of a white man from the North who some years ago was being driven by a negro from one small South Carolina town to another. "Can you vote down here?" asked the whie man by way of making conversation. "Oh, yes, sah," was the reply, "I kin vote all right— dat is I kin vote if I kin git registered, but I has been trying to git registered fo' de pas' ten years, and I is always jes too late or jes too early. If it wasn't for dat I could vote all right, boss."

IN MEMORIAM

In sad and loving remembrance of my dear Husband, Singilton T. Bryden, who departed this life August 4, 1923.

Farewell farewell my Husband dear,
I've spent three sad and lonely years
You left me with an aching heart
The day you and I did part.
Loving wife, Mary D. Bryden..

In loving remembrance of my dear Daughter, Susie Maslin, who departed this life four years ago.

Sweet memories will linger forever,
Time cannot change them it's true;
Years that may come cannot sever,
Our loving remembrance of you.
Loving Mother, Mary D. Bryden.

WAR ON CHICKEN THIEVES

Chicken thieving in Kent county has reached a point where chicken owners have been compelled to keep a sharp lookout with a shot gun at hand. Some residents of Chestertown have had their chicken houses raided three times in the past few weeks.

Residents of Washington Ave., Chestertown, were started Sunday night by the report of a shot gun, which was fired by a neighbor at some one trying to pick the lock on his hen house door. Another resident on West High street last week surprised a chicken thief by presenting him with a load of bird shot.

The thieving has been so numerous and hazen and scattered over such a wide area that the sheriff has been unable to cope with it; in view of this fact residents are staging awake part of the night and firing on the raiders.

SUMMER STYLES

This is a Summer of sleeves, collars and superlatives. Everything is very this or very that. Sleeves, as every one knows, are very important this year, and one further learns that they are very soft, very short or very long, sometimes very full, occasionally very close, many times very much embroidered—in any case very interesting. When collars are discussed, which is practically all the time in style centers, one hears that they are very original, very flattering, very much given to ends and bows. Speaking of bows, it is their Summer too. They are very large or very small, very coquettish under an ear, very quaint or primly chic at the throat.

The accent this season is on softness.

Curved lines, blousing, shirrings, tiny tucks, plaits, loose panels, flares, and things of that sort all cater to this effect until the frock is a soft and feminine thing. Light and airy, it makes the most of motion, blowing easily about, flying ribbon ends, fluttering full skirts and coloring the landscape with prints, plaids and polka dots.

Red is doing its best and brightest to make this a gay season along with black and white, navey and white, a new yellow called "sunni," crayon-blue, mint-green, June rose, chartreuse and orchid. Tangerine is chic with a white, canary and jade print; violet and geranium colors are used on sand, and peacock and Nile green make a print that is unusually lovely.

GREAT ENTERTAINMENT NEXT TUESDAY NIGHT.

Circuses may come and circuses may go, but the magician goes on forever mystifying with his wonderful art. The world of magic is not unlike the great world itself and all its movements and activities, for the seen is only a part, and a very small part of the unseen.

Watching a magical performance is good exercises in perception and after seeing Wallace cause ducks and rabbits to vanish in thin air, one would hesitate to hang any man on circumstantial evidence.

Wallace, who is to perform at the Lyceum Theatre next Tuesday, August 10, comes to Chestertown with an enviable reputation as a wonder worker and entertainer. Rabbits, ducks, flags, pigeons, trunks, boxes and lamps are all used by the master magician in his program.

You will be mystified, tickled, puzzled, thrilled, tricked, charmed and made happy in the two hours that Wallace is in town.

A NARROW ESCAPE

Mr. Mack Patrick had a narrow escape Tuesday night of this week while sleeping on the back porch of his home. The night being very warm Mr. Patrick moved his bed to the back porch and while asleep heard someone in his back yard. Turning his head to see who the intruder was he narrowly escaped a severe blow of a club aimed at his head. The assailant made his escape but left the club and no trace of him could be found. There could be found no motive for the attack.

KENT MILK ADVANCED

Kent dairymen are rejoicing because of an advance in the price of milk twenty-three cents per 100 pounds, effective July 1, checks for which will be received August 10. The price was reduced during May and June by the Philadelphia distributors, due, it was stated, to losses sustained some months ago by the distributors, and the reduction cut a big hole in the monthly checks of the farmers, who were compelled to resort to buying expensive feeds because of the shortage of pasture due to the drought.
