MORE WHEAT THIS YEAR

ACREAGE TO BE INCREASED ABOUT 22,000 ACRES

A boost of 22,000 acres—about four per cent—is indicated in the area to be sown to wheat this fall in Maryland, if farmers carry out their intention, as expressed by them to the United States Department of Agriculture on the average date of August 1.

This would make 576,000 acres, according to John H. Dennee, Federal crop estimator for Maryland, against 554,000 sown in the fall of 1925.

The area Maryland farmers have in mind to sow is seven per cent. less than the pre-war (1909-1913) average annual fall sowing of 619,000 acres. It is about seventeen per cent. less than the average annual fall sowing of 695,000 acres during the years 1914-1918, and about three per cent. less than the average annual fall sowing of 593,000 acres for the years 1919-1923.

Farmers of the United States are intending to sow an acreage of winter wheat this fall 14..4 per cent. greater than sown last fall. The area they say they intend to sow is thirty-four per cent. greater than the pre-war (1909-1913) average annual fall sowing of 33,594,000 acres.

The purpose in putting this information before Maryland farmers now, says M. Dennee, is that they may see what farmers over the country as a whole say they intend to do in the matter of sowing wheat this fall and modify their plans if a change appears desirable.
