POULTRY NOTES

ITEMS THAT WILL HELP IN POULTRY WORK THROUGHOUT COUNTRY

Second Maryland Egg Laying Contest

Pen space in the Maryland Egg Laying Contest is limited to 100 pens. all of which will undoubtedly be occupied at the opening of the Second Contest on November 1.

Maryland poultrymen should apply at once in order to secure a place in the second contest. Space is reported to be growing scarce. Make applications to: Roy H. Waite. Supervisor, College Park, Md.

Intestinal Worms Disastrous to Profits

Observations throughout the State show that considerable loss and mortality in young stock is due to an unusually heavy infestation of intestinal worms. The wet spells this summer seemed to an outbreak of the pest that wrought havoc in a number of flocks examined.

Every case observed was that of young stock either being too closely confined or housed on land which had been contaminated because of continued use for poultry.

It is well to cull and dispose of all individuals which show marked symptoms of worm infestation. Pullets, stunted by intestinal worms, seldom, if ever, make a profit as egg producers, to say nothing of their being a constant danger to the rest of the stock.

Such pullets are practically a dead loss. Therefore, the necessity of proper management in regard to sanitation toprevent outbreaks of worm infestation is very evident.

No poultry raiser can afford to regard intestinal parasites lightly. They have cured many a case of "Chicken Fever."

Do Not Rush Pullets For Eggs

Poultrymen should pay special attention to the size. and condition of flesh of pullets before starting them out under laying management.

full body maturity and weight for the breed, are better egg producers than pullets stimulated into production before full maturity and weight has been attained. has been conclusively demonstrated in experimental work and Egg Laying Contests.

Pullets of the smaller breeds usually require about five months. and the heavier breeds about six months to reach full maturity and size for the breed.

It is well worth while to give a little special attention in order to be sure of a good supply of reserve flesh on the pullets before they are placed in laying quarters. This "fleshing" or fattening may be accomplised by reducing the meat scrap in the mash, or by increasing the amount of grain fed daily to the pullets. Some poultrymen make a practice of hopper-feeding grain in a manner similar to dry mash, in order a proper supply of fat forming foods at this stage of development. This usually prevents forcing the pullets into a somewhat premature production.

Cull The Flock For Breeders

The time is now at hand when the laying flock should be culled for breeders.

Hens that are still laying in September and October without having molted are the better layers, and should be separated from the others to produce hatching eggs next spring.

The elimination of molters throughout the summer is not only an effective way of building up egg production of a flock, but is also very effective in combatting disease.

The better layers are usually possessed of the greatest vigor and resistance to disease. The elimination of the poorer layers and early molters is effective in controlling Bacillary White Diarrhea as well as other diseases.

To do in September and October:

Cull undesirable pullets. Cull out early molters. Condition pullets for laying. Select best layers for breeders. Clean and Disinfect.

FLORIDA DAMAGED BY HURRICANE

KENT PEOPLE THERE ARE REPORTED AS BEING SAFE

People of Kent have learned of the wreck of Florida by hurricane with deep regrets. Many former Kent countians now reside there, and, to date. they are all reported safe.

The hurricane was devastating and disheartening. But Florida will rise from the harvoc of the disaster perhaps better. nobler and more prosperous. In the meantime Southern Florida is taking stock of its losses, gathering its dead, caring for its injured and homeless and planning to repair the almost incalculable damage.

According to the first reports to come through direct from the stricken district placed the known dead at 325. with approximately forty missing. The injuried are still uncounted, but they are estimated at over 4,000. with 40,000 homeless. The property damage is placed at $50,000,000.

Relief measures by state and nation are under way. President Coolidge issued a proclamation calling on the American people to come to the assistance of the storm sufferers. Government departments at Washington offered their aid. The national headquarters of the American Red Cross made an initial contribution of $100,000 to the Florida relief rund and practically every city and state in the nation launched plans to aid the afflicted people. Fast trains and airplanes are rushing medical supplies and food to the stricken area.

—The Kent County Council for Home Demonstration work will met at the Chestertown High School on Thursday, September 30th at 10 a. m. Mrs. Helen V. McKinley, District Manager and clothing specialist will be present.
