—Worcester County, Md., poultry raisers are realizing an average of $20,000 weekly from eggs and poultry shipped to northern markets, it was stated following a check-up by chicken men in that County. Approximately 1,000 crates of chickens are shipped from Worcester County farms and communities each week. Twelve years ago county poultry raisers boasted a few hens in each farm yard. Today the industry has grown to poultry farms 5,000 to 8,000 layers which take full time work for five and six men. The farmers have found that poultry pays and is practcially an all-the-year-round source of revenue.
