Monks' Orange Trees Began Big Industry

A few orange trees brought from Spain by Franciscan monks in 1769 and planted in mission grounds marked the beginning of a citrus industry in California which approaches a yearly turnover of $100,000,000,000.

The first orchard of any size was planted in 1804 or 1805 near the San Gabriel mission, ten miles from where Los Angeles now is. Four hundred seedlings covered six acres.

Early records say extensive orchards were developed and were exceedingly prolific, although John C. Fremont, who visited the Franciscan establishments after their secularization in 1834, said little remained of the orchards then.

The navel, California's winter orange, was planted extensively in the '70s on desert land which had been considered worthless. The navel orange of today is one of the big four of citrus fruits.

The valencia orange was brought from the Azores islands in 1865. Lemons were imported from Australia and Sicily.

Wonder Railway

The Buenos Ayres and Pacific railway is probably the most wonderful in the world.

Though the two termini, Buenos Ayres and Valparaiso, are tropical towns, the line, owing to the immense elevation it attains in crossing the Andes, runs for hundreds of miles through a region of eternal snow, and is frequently blocked by avalanches.

Amongst its wonders is a spiral tunnel that cost $5,000,000 to build, a natural bridge of rock, and a string of 118 steel bridges linked together by short stretches of solid permanent way.

Glowworms in Cavern

A "glowworm" cavern was discovered in the bush country near Te Kuiti, Australia. The walls are literally covered with thousands of small glowing worms which give the rocks the appearance of being studded with brilliant jewels. And strangely enough, the lights of the glowworms pale when the least bit of noise is made in the cavern, as for instance when a person speaks. In the daylight the worms look like common grubs.—Pathfinder Magazine.

Won Fame After Death

Perhaps Henry D. Thoreau of Concord, Mass., who died in 1862, is the only American author of renown whose works were not published until after his death. He published but two books while alive, both at his own expense. One of them had a moderate circulation, the other almost none. All his life he kept a journal, and all of this has subsequently been published, so that his works now total about 30 volumes, all of which are in print and in demand.

Out of Stock

The patient saleswoman brought out the seventeenth hat. The customer seemed impressed, but her doting husband spoke up with decision:

"That hat does not become you, my angel."

The saleswoman produced another.

"And that certainly is not worthy of you, my angel."

"I fear we cannot suit your angel," said the saleswoman, finally. "We have nothing in the way of a halo."
