Simple, but Oh My! How Vecto does heat!

You'll find the great secret of VECTO'S operating principle under its handsome porcelain enamel jacket. The air is "rubbed" against a mass of ribs or fins; and as it expands and rises is thus made to carry off every particle of heat, "faster than bread sops up gravy."

Ordinary heaters of same size must be driven to 750 degrees of red-hot heat to equal the volume of low, gentle warmth poured out by the VECTO. It's lock-safe door seals in all ash-dust and coal-gases; ideally clean. The Ideal VECTO Warm Air Heater at $97 (freight extra) offers best heating to those not prepared to invest in Ideal ARCOLA Hot Water Radiator Heating. Easy payments. Write to Dept. R for catalog free.

MARYLAND'S MOTHERS AND BABIES

Care of the mothers-to-be as a means of safeguarding the lives and health of both mothers and babies in Maryland, is urged by Dr. J. H. M. Knox, Jr., Chief of the Bureau of Child Hygiene of the State Department of Health. "One of the greatest problems in public health," he said" is to save lives of infants. Each year, in the counties of Maryland, there are about fifteen hundred deaths among children under a year old, or approximately one out of every twelve born alive.

"The surprising fact about this large loss of life is that nearly one half of it occurs in babies less than a month old. The improvement that has taken place in the milk supply and the better understanding on the part of mothers of baby hygiene and baby care and baby feeding, have cut down the death rate among the older babies, but they have not affected the death rate during the first few weeks of a baby's life.

"Doctors and others who have worked among mothers and babies have learned that many of these little lives can be saved only when the mothers are properly advised and cared for before the babies are born.

"Some interesting figures have recently been published that were gathered in Pennsylvania and that are of interest to every mother in Maryland. A survey made in twenty-five cities showed that only eight per cent. of the mothers had received proper instruction before their babies were born. Among these mothers there were no deaths. Among the other 4242 women who did not have such advice, one woman in every ninety-six, lost her life at the birth of her baby, and in this last group there were six times as many baby deaths as in the number born to mothers who had prenatal care. Moreover, the number of babies born dead and the number of babies who died within a month was four times as great among the group of mothers who had not received timely advice.

"These figures are just as true in Maryland. And our doctors here, have long recognized the importance of timely instruction of the mother-to be. No other method will so effectively save the lives of women and children now being lost. It would be a blessing if women's clubs and other organizations could bring these facts home to every woman in the State."
