TRIAL

By Edgar A. Guest

We are not promised easy roads to fare,
It was not said life should be struggle free.
Burdens there are for every man to bear,
Plain is the symbol of mortality.

Who suffers, lives! Who neither hopes nor fears
And is not conscious that his joys may cease
Has joined the dead of all the ancient years,
For in the grave is only perfect peace.

We grow by strife, by faith in doubtfull days,
By courage in the presence of despair,
Those splendid virtues men are quick to praise
Are fashioned by the burdens which they bear.

The living suffer, and the wise men know
That out of struggle conquest is attained,
Faith holds them fast through all the storms which blow
And there's no loss but something else is gained.

CHESTNUTS MAY RETURN

SOME THINK NEWLY FOUND SEEDLINGS WILL REPLACE BLIGHT—KILLED ONES

Kent County's farfamed chestnut ridges, where lads and lassies of another generation were wont to gather or collect great sacks of nuts, may soon be restored if recent discoveries prove of real scientific value.

Mountaineers in Western Maryland have found a new stand of chestnuts springing up from seedlings, and the new trees appear immune from blight which several years ago destroyed millions of feet of fine chestnut timber, and sent the memory of abundant chestnuts crashing down into the deep abyss of almost forgotten relics, including the sleigh, ox-cart and spinning wheel.

Mountaineers who have discovered this new growth predict in several decades chestnuts again will be found in abundance. They believe that nature has discovered what scientists have failed thus far to do—how to cope with the blight.

The blight first made its appearance in the United States in 1904, affecting bark of chestnut trees on Long Island. It was identified as a fungus, caused by a parasite, hitherto confined to Europe. Some nurseryman imported a few tainted trees and the native stock became affected. The blight soon spread to the forests of New York, and by this time scientists became alarmed.

After twenty years of frantic research and after hundreds of thousands of dollars had been spent in vain on remedies, scientists were forced to the conclusion that there was no hope of checking the disease and that not enough trees will survive to restock the continent. The parasite soon spread from New York to other forests until practically every chestnut tree has either been killed or is doomed. The blight is now marching south in the forests below the Mason and Dixon line.

The discovery of the new stand of young chestnut trees, however, is expected to lead foresters to cease their efforts of checking the blight among the old trees and devote their efforts to restocking the forests with young ones.

AFTER FIRE BUG

DETECTIVES TRYING TO LOCATE MAN WHO HAS TERRORIZED DELAWARE TOWN

Another searching investigation is in progress at Hartly, Del., as Delaware authorities make another vigorous effort to apprehend the mysterious fire-bug who has continuously terrorized the community for the last ten months.

Deputy Attorney-General Earle D. Willey with Detective, D. D. Wharton and a stenographer, have spent the greater part of the week at Hartly investigating the latest fire. The investigation will be resumed again.

Mr. Willey states he hopes that the methods being pursued, that of interrogating the citizens of Hartly as to their whereabouts prior to the fire and any circumstances leading up to it, may develop something from which a clue might be secured as to the cause of the numerous incendiary fires in Hartly.

He states that the citizens are deeply interested in the investigation and are giving all possible aid to the state authorities.

The citizens of Hartly realize that if the perpetrator of the fires is ever apprehended, they themselves must exert every effort possible to locate the party or parties, knowing full well that if a stranger or an officer known to the people is sent to the village, he will be watched and the firebug naturally will shun him or feel conscious of the fact that he or they are being watched and will not dare to start a fire during the presence of such outsiders.
