Federal Court Is Holding Session At Denton, Md.

First Time In Legal History Of State That Court Sits On Shore

The first Federal Court ever to sit on the Eastern Shore of Maryland convened at Denton on Monday of this week. The Court is to try cases coming under the Federal jurisdiction in the nine countys of this peninsula.

Judge William C. Coleman, recently appointed associate judge for the Maryland district is sitting.

Thirty-three Volstead violation cases, one postal fraud and one auto theft case will be brought before the court.

The court was first called to order on Monday morning at 10 a. m. The bar of the Eastern Shore counties welcomed the court with an impressive ceremony before the actual business was taken up.

Those taking part in the ceremony were Joshua Clayton, of Elkton; Senator S. Scott Beck, of Chestertown; Edwin H. Brown, Jr., of Centreville; Henry C. Lewis, of Denton; W. M. Shehan, of Easton; ex-Governor Emerson C. Harrington, of Cambridge; Fred Webb, of Salisbury; Colonel Harry Waters, of Princess Anne; and John Staten, of Snow Hill.

Three Kent men were to be tried before the Court for violation of the Volstead law. It is said that Chas. Nehus, of Rees Corner, was found guilty and sentenced to 90 days in jail. His sentence will not begin for 20 days because of the illness of his wife and child.

Henry Mercer, it was reported, received a sentence of 45 days in jail.

James Whittington, colored, had not been tried at the time of going to press and it is said that his case may be shifted to Baltimore.

Three Kent men, Conlyn Noland, Fred G. Usilton and C. Romie Skirven, were called for petit jury duty at the Court.

Remarks of Honorable T. Alan Goldsborough at the opening of the United States District Court at Denton, on Monday, January 16th, 1928, at 10:00 a. m.

Since 1801 it has been necessary for citizens of the Eastern Shore to go to Baltimore whenever they had any business in the United States Court. This has always been extremely inconvenient for our people, due to the fact that the Chesapeake Bay separated Baltimore from the Eastern Shore. It has been impossible to transact any business with the United States Court, except from Cecil County, without being away from home for at least two days, and spending a night in Baltimore. Not only considerable expense was involved in the matter of transportation, food and lodging, applying to parties and witnesses alike, but parties litigant have found it practically necessary, in addition to their local counsel, to employ an attorney in Baltimore, one familiar with the habit of mind of the jury, largely picked, as it was, from Baltimore City, and almost entirely from the Western Shore, and who was conversant with the atmosphere of the Court, its approach to, and method of disposing of, legal business.

Going a little more into detail, citizens of the Shore, sued by residents of other states in the United States District Court of Maryland, have been compelled to take their witnesses to Baltimore, employ Baltimore attorneys, and have their controversies determined in an atmosphere almost as alien as it transferred to a distant state. Shoremen charged with crime have been placed in the same position.

It was for those reasons that the Committee on the Judiciary of the House of Representatives listened with sympathetic interest to my appeal on behalf of the bill, which later enacted into law, has resulted in the opening of this Court, here this morning.

The instince for justice is basic in the human race. The administration of justice is exceedingly difficult, and in this period of transition since the World War, when so many traditional land marks of conduct are being assailed as outworn and as interfering with the individual's highest expression, that administration calls for added tolerance, sympathy, and human understanding, and our people believe that its administration in their behalf in the Federal Courts will be greatly facilitated by the operation of this law, and certainly the expense to our people will be greatly lessened.

The reason Denton was fixed in the Act for the Eastern Shore sittings is because the map of Maryland indicated Denton to be the most centrally located of the County seats on the Shore, the Judiciary Committee having also before it that the draft boards met at Denton during the war as being the point most accessible to the Shore as a whole, and the reason why the sittings of the Court were fixed for the third Monday in January and the first Monday in July was because these dates did not conflict with any of the jury terms of our State Courts.

As the characteristics of any one individual have practically no bearing upon the temper and quality of a large community I think I can say Your Honor, without any implication of personal agetism, that the Eastern Shore is more than a locality, it is a people. A few years age a very famous man spent a few weeks on the Shore, a man who had traveled widely, and with a vast experience of places and people. He has said that, in his opinion, no where in this world could be found a people with a higher average of industry, intelligence and character. Our people are proud, yet with a just humility, they are ambitious, but have a profound understanding of the great moral truth that the world is wide enough for us all to display whatever of virtue, whatever of talent, we have. They are people of conviction, yet with a wide tolerance and sympathy. It is much a people who welcome the advent of the Federal Court on the Eastern Shore, and Your Honor can rely that from them will be accorded to the Court a just and abiding respect and the most sympathetic co-operation.
