A VERY INTERESTING article on dairying, by County Agent H. B. Derrick, appears on page 2 of this issue. Mr. Derrick points out that the tuberculine test in only one step in the effort to make Kent County an outstanding dairy section. The article includes many facts that will interest dairymen. The development and standardization of the dairy and poultry industry is progressing rapidly and will probably have the effect of changing the present agricultural standards of the county.

THE congressional situation in this congressional district, which embraces the nine Eastern Sohre counties, is becoming more complicated each week. Congressman Goldsborough announced his candidacy last week for re-election and State Senator Legg, of Queen Annes county, announces this week his candidacy for congress from the same district, while the friends of Senator Beck, of this county, are urging him to become a candidate for the same palce. Just what Senator Beck will do we do not know but we understand he is receiving much encouragement from some of the counties other than Kent. Should Mr. Beck decide to become a candidate it would make a three cornered fight. Information has reached this office that he is practically assured of four counties with strong support of some of the prominent leaders in one of the remaining five counties.

THE KENT COUNTY Chamber of Commerce has advocated the building of nine foot concrete roads throughout the secondary roads of Kent county. This policy was adopted after a careful study of traffic and road conditions and the milage of unpaved roads in the county against the concrete milage allowed each year. Transportation is the key to progress and it can not be perfected until our road system is in such a condition that traffic in all sections of the county may move twelve months in the year. The nine foot concrete road together with the county's slag road program point to the solution of our road problem in the shortest possible time. The Chamber of Commerce recommended this program to the Commissioners of Kent county believing that the State Roads Commission will widen these roads when excess traffic demands it.

IN ONE MAN'S LIFETIME

The following tribute to the late Jonothan Dixon Maxwell, who died at his home at Worton Manner, Kent County on Thursday of last week, was published as an editorial in the Washington Post, of Washington, D. C.

The death of Jonathan Maxwell last Thursday removes a name associated with the automobile industry since its very beginning. Like many other motor pioneers, this Indiana boy entered the industry through interest in the bicycle. Early in his life he became interested with another youth, Elmer Apperson, in a small bicycle repair shop located in Kokomo, Ind., and these two, together with Elwood Haynes, in 1893 built what is today considered the forerunner of the modern automobile.

Jonathan Maxwell watched the automobile industry grow from a handful of experimental models to a yearly production of millions. He constructed one of the first, if not the first, automobile, and died in an age in which 20,000,000 motor cars swarm the highways.

Fifteen years ago, his fortune made, he relinquished control of the company producing cars bearing his name and retired. Since then the Maxwell corporation passed through several sets of hands, finally to be purchased by Walter P. Chrysler, who subsequently discontinued use of the Maxwell name.

The automotive industry has been one of rapid development and of equally rapid change. Few of the pioneers today still remain in the industry, and few of the cars bearing family names are produced by companies in which the family still is interested. There are notable exceptions, of course; but as a general thing development of the automobile industry has been characterized by frequent infusion of new blood. Even more characteristic than passing of the old names, however, has been the mortality rate among cars themselves. The roster of those that are almost forgotten—Alco, Jeffries, Scripps, Briscoe, American Underslung, E. M. F., Ohio, Northern and numerous others—is larger by far than that of those that are in production today. Each, however, fulfilled its function in the gradual yet rapid evolution of today's automobile. Each brought closer to perfection the economic blessing that Jonathan Maxwell and his companions produced 35 years ago.

5 PER CENT. INTEREST ON FARM LOANS

Since the annual rate of interest was reproduced to 5 per cent. on November 15th, 1927, The Kent and Queen Anne National Farm Loan Association has received applications for loans totalling $73,000, showing the increasing popularity of this Co-operative method of borrowing money on farm lands.

If you are now carrying a 6 per cent. mortgage on your farm which never grows less, why not transfer it to the Federal Land Bank and get the benefit of the 5 per cent interest, enabling you to reduce your mortgage principal every year.

If you desire to purchase a farm the Federal Land Bank will finance the proposition to the extent of 50 per cent. of the purchase price on the 5 per cent. annual interest basis.

The Federal Land Bank proposition reduces the principal amount of your mortgage every year until it is finally liquidated on easy payments.

Come in and let me tell you all about it.
