THE NEW FORD CAR

The Following Are Some of the Out-standing Features of the New Ford Car:

GENERATOR

The generator on the new Ford car is of the power house type. There is no bearing on the commutator. As the result of this no oil can get on the commutator. The bearing is on the inside of the armature and runs in an oil reservoir which holds sufficient oil to last a year. Ball bearings which are 500 per cent. oversize are used in the bearings. There are two brushes for each load, and each brush will carry a full load. The armature and core are fully ventilated giving a cool generator even at full load. All together the generator is so designed as to eliminate most forms of generator trouble, with greatly increased efficiency, and should easily out last the life of the car without giving any trouble.

CLUTCH

The clutch in the new Ford car is the same as that designed for the Lincoln car except smaller. It is the only dry plate multiple disc clutch with as many disc, used in any light car in America. The advantage of the clutch with so many plates is, that it operates softly and smoothly at all times. It is built to withstand wear and give long service. The Ford clutch spring is of 386 pounds tension and requires no adjusting.

TRANSMISSION

The new Ford car has a standard selective sliding gear shift transmission with three speeds forward and one reverse. The transmission is the same as used in the Lincoln car except a smaller size. All of the gears and shifts are of chrome alloy steel, heat treated to give hardness. The countershaft is carried on roller bearings, these bearings being selected because of their extreme efficiency in carrying radial loads such as are exerted on these gears. For the same reason roller bearings are used in the connection where the drive shaft joins the spline shaft, as the load there also is radial. Ball-bearings are used for the bearings on which the drive and spline shaft rotate, because of their effectiveness in carrying radial loads to which there is a certain amount of endtrust. The reverse idler is carried in bronze bushings. The transmission in the new Ford car equals if not exceeds that of any other car made today.
