Sunshine Cure in the Park

By DOROTHY DOUGLAS

(Copyright.)

THE day was delightfully sunny and the park was looking unusually cheerful in its colors; but Wyndham was distinctly disgruntled with parks, whether lovely or otherwise.

If that infernal lamp standard hadn't been in its proper place on the sidewalk Wyndham's car would not have swerved into it and succeeded in breaking his leg.

The doctor had insisted on at least another fortnight of "keeping out in the open" before getting back to business. Wyndham fretted like a colt in harness. He wanted to get back to a man's job.

Rats, his joyous terrier, however, was having the time of his life. Every day for the past few weeks he and his master had had a romp. Rats liked nothing better than to race in the park and frighten all the birds into instant flight.

At present he was in the seventh heaven, having roused a score or more of squawking gulls from a most peaceful floating party they were enjoying on the surface of the lake.

"Oh, drat! You silly little dog! I was getting such a lovely sketch of those birds and now you've spoiled it all! No—go away—I don't like you."

Wyndham turned around in surprise to see the owner of the voice. She had been concealed behind a bush beside the path and was sketching in an enormous sketch book.

"Oh, I say," said Wyndham, doffing his tweed cap, "I'm frightfully sorry that hound of mine has disturbed the pigeons. He didn't, of course, know they were posing for their portraits."

"Those pigeons happen to be sea gulls," said the fair artist. "I could weep—I was getting them so nicely—"

"Oh, my goodness, don't weep," hurriedly exclaimed Wyndham. "I'll make Rats sit up for five minutes while you sketch him—by way of punishment. Rats—big!" He commanded the small and astonished terrier. "At once. And stay for five minutes. Don't even wiggle an ear."

The girl looked up at Wyndham and smiled. Who could have helped it? And that smile simply washed out all the disgruntled musings with which Wyndham's brain had been cluttered. He even found a second in which to feel that the lamp post had been serving its countryman well—otherwise he would not have been in the park and would thereby have missed the sweetest smile he had ever seen. He liked the eyes, too.

"Oh, please, don't punish him like that. He looks so sorry for himself sitting up like a dummy."

"Yes, I will punish him. He had no right to frighten those pi—swans." Wyndham had flung himself down uninvited to watch the sketch. "I have to supervise this work of art."

"Perhaps you would like to purchase it when completed," laughed Daphne. "I need a new hat." She was sketching while she chatted and Wyndham fell to wondering if she were joking or not. She certainly looked like one of those impoverished artists with her shabby coat and more shabby hat.

"I'll buy it for five dollars, and tomorrow, if you will make another sketch, I will buy that, too. I can find any number of animal models. Most of my friends would rather have a painting of their dogs than of their husbands."

"Nice sort of friends you have," laughed Daphne. "You evidently belong to the idle rich."

"Rich but not idle," put in Wyndham. "Confounded swerve of my car caused a bit of a smashup and I'm expected to be idle for another fortnight under doctor's orders. I don't mind quite so much now that I've met you," he added with a grin.

Daphne turned astonished eyes upon him. "But you haven't met me—nor have I met you," she said severely.

"Oh!" growled Wyndham. "What a rotten situation—unkind fate and all that sort of thing. What are we going to do about it?"

"I am certainly not going to waste any time worrying about it," said Daphne, and closed her sketch book, refusing to draw another line while Rats sat up so forlornly. "The world can jog along very nicely even though we have not met."

"Not for me, young lady," said Wyndham. "It will never be the same world again. I shall only live for the day when you will put that little hand in mine and say, 'pleased to meet you, Mr. Tom Wyndham.'"

The girl gasped. "But you're not Tom Wyndham of the Glover Manufacturing company, are you? Goodness me! My dad has been raving about you and insisting on my meeting what he calls a real out-and-out man for months. And I flatly refused. I am always wary of these paragons and frightened of their many virtues."

And before Wyndham could realize her intention she had made a swift plunge behind the shrubbery and vanished from his sight. He said a few forceful words which made Rats want to cover his wagging ears. "Now I've got to ask every man in the office if he has an adorable daughter with violet eyes and a clef in her chin who sketches. Confound the luck."

But Daphne hurried home with scarlet cheeks and a new light in her eyes.

"Dad," she said that evening, "I sort of want to meet your Mr. Wyndham. Could you ask him to dinner tomorrow night?"

So the little hand was in his own even before Wyndham had expected it.

New York's Early Days

An article published in the Christian Advocate says: "At the beginning of the Nineteenth century the 'commercial metropolis of the United States' occupied only the lower end of Manhattan island, what is now 'up town' being still made up of spacious farms and country estates, including the little village of Harlem. The actual measurements of the city proper are given as three miles in length (from the Battery to Fourteenth street), one and a half miles in width and eight miles in circumference."

Odd Divorce Customs Found Among Malays

There is a peculiar Malay tribe in Sumatra, numbering only a few hundred persons, who spend their entire lives on the water, a small boat being their lifelong home. The stern of the craft has the rudest kind of a shelter, while amidships there is an arrangement of stone on which a fire is built. Forward there are baskets and other means of carrying fish and other commodities which these persons gather and trade. They have no laws or organization, but they have rather definite ideas of marriage and divorce. The lovelorn man, meeting the girl of his choice, asks her parents. If found to be agreeable the youth has to pay down 12 Dutch dollars (equal to 30 guilders); that is, if he is able to. But he also may purchase on the installment plan and make time payments. But in this case he cannot get a divorce unless the full amount is paid to the wife. The pair then go through a ceremony. If the husband wants a divorce, then he loses the 30 guilders paid, but if the wife wants to get divorced, then she must pay 120 guilders to the husband, which she will be able to do only in the rarest cases. If the man gets his divorce, then he may decide whether the children must go with him or whether they may remain with the mother; if the wife obtains a divorce and has paid the 120 guilders, then the children may choose for themselves.

Simple Way to Handle Child's Fear of Dark

If your child develops a fear of the dark, do you know how to handle it? It is possible to cure him in a very simple way. When you put him to bed tonight, leave the door partly open and a dim light burning in the hall. The child will go to sleep. Then, gradually, close the door a little and dim the light a little every night. If you work patiently, four or five nights will enable you to recondition the child so that the door can be closed and the light turned out. If you do not control the hild in this patient way, you may, by shouting at him or spanking him, keep him from whimpering out loud when you put him to bed in the dark, but he will lie in bed trembling with fear. This is not your aim. Your real purpose should be to remove the fear, to recondition the child.—Children, the Magazine for Parents.

Good Qualities of Fruits

Nutrition and Diet says: "The apple leads among the orchard fruits. It carries small amounts of vitamines A, B, and C. It has definite laxative properties, probably owing to the large cellulose content. The young apple contains a large amount of starch, but as it ripens this is rapidly converted into sugar until when fully ripe it contains little or no starch. The acid content decreases as the sugar increases. In like manner its pectin, valuable in the formation of jelly, decreases with the ripening process. The citrus fruits are next in importance to the apple, and their culture is being enormously increased. Oranges come first. They offer an excellent source of readily assimilable glucose, and for this reason orange juice is used when there is necessity for quick-assimilable carbohydrate which will throw the least burden on the digestive organs. The orange contains both vitamines A and B."

Samplers in History

The earliest mention of a sampler so far found is in 1502, when Elizabeth of York paid 8 pence for an ell of linen cloth to make one. A sampler is referred to by John Shelton, the poet, about the same time. Originally samplers were intended for practical purposes. Needlework and embroidery were practically the only relaxation of women at that time and samplers were made for "handkerchiefs, tablecloths, sheets, towels, napkins and pillow bearers." The earliest American sampler was that of Loara Standish. The next reported was that of Mary Hollingsworth of Salem, which was probably made about 1665. Sarah Lord made one in 1668.

Trees Don't Freeze

Notwithstanding the popular belief that trees freeze in the winter, scientific investigation has proved, according to a Belle Isle forester, that they cannot freeze but remain dormant during the winter much like certain wild animals. "Every day or so some one asks about the trees freezing," he said, "and they seem to doubt my word. Sap circulation stops in the winter and the cells remain inactive. The sap congeals and prevents freezing else the tree would die. Sometimes frost will split a tree trunk open but this is due to contraction and expansion and not to freezing." —Detroit News.

Aids to Cool Greeting

One of the prized curios found occasionally in England is the once popular hand cooler. These implements were spheroids of clear glass and were used 150 years ago by society favorites who considered it necessary to have their hands cool when the gallant men bent low and kissed the fair one's hand in greeting. If the lady had one of the cool glass balls in her hand, which was extended to cover the ball, she was supposed to be meeting the highest demands of social correctness. Some of the balls were striped in colors to conform with milady's costume.—Detroit News.

Hard to Find

He was very old, but passionately attached to the royal and ancient game. The more he played, however, the more inaccurate became his strokes, and his play generally was worse and worse as time went on.

Finally, after missing the ball 15 times in succession on one occasion, he turned to the patient caddie and remarked:

"Dear, dear! I suppose there can't be any worse players than myself."

"Well," returned the caddie consolingly, "there may be worse players, but, of course, they don't play."

A JIM-DANDY NICKEL CIGAR

Made with Ripe Tobacco and Ripe Experience

When good tobacco and thirty years of cigar-making experience get together, you're pretty sure of a good smoke. But when combined in a cigar you can buy for a nickel, man, you've found something!

Here it is: Bayuk's Havana Ribbon. Value? Count back over the old-time purchasing power of a five-cent piece. Smoke a Bayuk Havana Ribbon. You'll find your nickel buys a better cigar than it ever bought.

Sheer popularity has done it. Immense production enables the use of tobaccos usually considered too expensive for five-cent cigars. Bayuk's Havana Ribbon is made entirely of ripe tobacco—the choice middle leaves of the plant. No bitter under-ripe nor "flat" over-ripe leaves. But pure, fragrant, mellow-mild flavor of tobacco at its best. Long filler too—no "cuttings" or short ends. Also sold in Practical Pocket Packages of five cigars.
