Wesley Summer School Session

DOVER.—A splendid group of church workers, both young and of mature years, with an excellent faculty, will assemble in Dover next Monday, July 22, for the second annual session of Wesley Summer School of Religious Education. From seventy-five to one hundred students from over the Peninsula are expected to register.

The faculty will include the following, with the courses indicated which each will teach:

Dr. Charles A. Coburn, Boston University School of Religious Education, "Pupil Study" and "Adult Psychology."

Rev. E. H. Brewster, Director of Religious Education for the Philadelphia Conference, "Principles of Teaching" and "Teaching Work of the Church."

Dr. Chester W. Quimby, Dickinson College, "Old Testament" and "Development of the English Bible."

Professor J. Quinter Miller, Boston University School of Religious Education, "Administration of the Church School" and "A Study of the Curriculm."

Miss Ruth Lindseth, Director of Young People's Work for the Wilmington Conference, "Senior Materials and Methods" and "Intermediate Materials and Methods."

Miss Clara Bragdon, newly appointed Director of Elementary Work for the Wilmington Conference, "Junior Materials and Methods."

Mrs. C. A. Lindsay, Primary Specialist from Washington, D. C., "Primary Administration."

Miss Bernice Hug[illegible] Kindergarten Specialist from the Lucy Webb Hayes Training School, Washington, D. C., "Kindergarten Administration."

Miss E. Vesta Haines, Director of Religious Education for Friends Meeting, Germantown, Pa., "Religious Dramatics for Young People."

Miss Catharine Gruber, Temple, Pa., "Recreational Leadership."

Rev. F. A. Lindhorst, Director of Religious Education for the Wilmington Conference, is Dean, and Rev. C. W. Clark, Sudlersville, Md., is Registrar.

A Demonstration School for children will be held simultaneously with the training school, in which the methods discussed in class will be put into practice.

This school is rapidly being considered the Church's Normal School for the Delmarva Peninsula.

Pride and Prunes

By JANE GRAY

(Copyright.)

MRS. WELLES looked at her four daughters with an inquiring expression. They looked very well—very pretty, one might say—although their clothes were obviously last year's style. The Welles family had suffered reverses since the death of the husband and father.

"What do you think of my plan?" asked Mrs. Welles at last.

"It's awful," groaned Madge. "I never expected we would come to keeping boarders."

"And I particularly detest prunes," complained Cicely.

"Think of the hard work," suggested Barbara, looking at her well-kept hands.

"We might make it a pruneless boarding house," and Della went off into a peal of merry laughter at her own wit, but her charming face clouded at once as she saw the disappointment in her mother's countenance. Were those new lines on her mother's placid brow? Lines of care and worry—with four idle daughters? Della stiffened in a ramrod way, that was like her father.

"We can do it if we want to," she said bluntly. "We're too lazy for words—all of our friends, rich and poor, are working—none of us are qualified to take up any special line of work and taking paying guests is respectable; we can keep our own home, reserve some rooms out of this big house for ourselves. Mother can superintend everything, I can help the cook in the kitchen, Molly and Barbara can wait on table and take care of rooms at first until we can afford to keep another maid, and Cicely shall keep all the accounts and sew for the rest of us. Who will join the league of workers?

With more or less reluctance they all agreed, but Cicely, the clever needle woman, pouted. "People make such foolish jokes about prunes and boarding houses—and oh, dear—I suppose I must join, too!"

Della called them the "band of unwilling workers," but her enthusiasm soon whipped them into line with the new enterprise, and they were encouraged by their friends.

Everything was planned in advance, and every room was rented before they were ready to receive "guests."

The girls were happy. Mrs. Welles was relieved of financial worry, and money seemed to flow into the cash box in a steady stream. Table boarders came from the neighborhood, and the Welles' place achieved a reputation.

For six months everything went well; never a word of complaint reached the family, and never a prune appeared upon the table.

Madge became engaged to a young college professor and Cicely was sewing on her sister's modest trousseau. Della, who called herself Cinderella, was dubbed Cinders by the rest of the family, became famous for her delicious pastry and sang like a thrush over her work in the kitchen.

One day the singing stopped and the singer dropped her pretty head. One of the guests was going to leave—and he had given no reason beyond the fact that his mother needed a change. Mr. Payton was young and attractive. He worked in the local bank and had a bright future. His mother was a robust old lady whom they all loved, but lately she had lost interest in life. She declared she was going out West to live with her married daughter and that would leave young Payton alone.

"I hate to leave Robert. No one knows what foolish girl he might fall in love with," Mrs. Payton had confided to Mrs. Welles. "One of your daughters now—"

The two elderly ladies did not know it, but one of the daughters—pretty Cinders herself—had captured Robert's heart and lost her own in exchange.

"When he leaves, he will forget all about me in the kitchen," mourned Della.

She lifted her floury hands for inspection, and then dropped them in confusion, for Robert Payton was looking into the vine-covered window of the butler's pantry where Della made her pastry. He poked his head through the vines, caught Della's floury hands and kissed them.

"Oh—" Della began to cry a little, and then told him all her woes. "There is an undercurrent of—something. The boarders are dissatisfied—the food is good—abundant, and we have variety—"

A slow grin spread over Payton's face. "Two things lacking, sweetheart—will you marry me if I tell you? You know I love you?"

"I will, anyway!" dared Della happily. "Tell me—what is the matter?"

"Prunes!" hissed Mr. Payton, "and baked beans! I know—because I want 'em myself."

Della stared. "We haven't any in the house—we wouldn't serve them."

"I'll get them now—we'll have 'em for dinner—and after dinner—is this your evening off, Miss Cinders?"

"Yes," whispered Della happily.

"I want to tell you the rest of the story of us two! In the meantime, to my errand—prunes and beans, hurrah!"

And Della began to sing like a nightingale. Once in awhile she stopped and laughed. "Prunes and beans—prunes and pride!"

MARKETING DEL-MAR-VA POTATOES

POTATOES SHIPPED IN SMALL PACKAGES SOLD AT PREMIUM

That the use of small packages in marketing Del-Mar-Va Irish potatoes will go far toward solving the potato marketing problem, is the statement of W. C. Cullen, General Manager of the Peninsula Produce Exchange, of Pocomoke City, Md., following an experiment by the Exchange which is now well underway That this may also apply to other commodities is the view of numerous growers and shippers who have watched the tryout carefully. It is strongly mentioned as being a possible solution to the marketing of other leading crops.

The Peninsula Exchange, for the first time in the history of potato growing in this section packed, shipped and promptly sold at a premium price several carloads of Irish potatoes put up in 15-pound peck burlap bags.

The first car was loaded at Snow Hill with 2000 of the handy, household packages. It reached Philadelphia the following day and arrived with contents in excellent condition. It met with immediate favor and was disposed of in record time. Numerous other cars have since been shipped to other large terminal markets and this form of shipping will be continued by the Peninsula Exchange during the remainder of the season.

"There is a definite demand for the small package from both the retailer and housewife. Quality goods packed under an established brand demand an attrctive price premium which more than justifies the cost of this operation," said Mr. Cullen.

He said that it is his belief that a steady demand will continue through the year for this type of package and that distributors will be justified in beginning to pack in these peck burlap bags from the first car shipped from Florida in the spring and continuing northward through the potato growing states as far as Maine.

5c SETTLES A BIG SMOKE QUESTION

Can There Really Be a Good Cigar for Five Cents?

Some say it never was, can nor will be done. But this ad says it is being done—that there's a really fine 5c cigar to be had: Bayuk's Havana Ribbon. And it's been on the market thirty years. A cigar must be good to make such a record.

And Bayuk's Havana Ribbon is better today than ever before. Immense production is doing it. Millions made; tobacco bought in such huge quantities, we are able to use long-filler, ripe tobacco from heart to wrapper. And still keep the price at 5c! Imagine! No bitter under-ripe nor flat-tasting over-ripe leaves. No loose bits to come out in your mouth. But all fine, full-flavored, age-mellowed tobacco, making a delightfully cool, mild, fragrant smoke. If you've one nickel in your pocket, man, put it to work and let Bayuk's Havana Ribbon settle the five-cent cigar question completely. Also Practical Pocket Packages of five cigars.

McCORMICK-DEERING 10-20, 15-30 AND FARMALL TRACTORS

Evidence is seen at every hand that farmers are pulling more profit out of their acres with power and machines that put more accomplishment into every working day, increasing production and reducing costs. Your acres offer equal opportunities for this new-day power farming equipment.

When you turn to power farming, take your tip from the widespread popularity of McCormick-Deering equipment. Your neighbors are making money with McCormick-Deering tractors and machines. Talk to one or more of these owners about the economy, long life, full 4-cylinder power, and easy operation of their McCormick-Deering tractors. If possible, climb on a McCormick-Deering yourself and pilot it over the soil. Your experience will prove an eye-opener.

McCormick-Deering tractor power, and the big-capacity machines that go with it, will work a magic transformation in all of your important operations.

During the coming weeks think of your crop production in terms of modern power farming. Figure what it will mean to you to save a day here and a week there as the season progresses. Think of the advantages of doing more thorough work while you are doing it in less time than ever before.
