Need a Good Memory

The ability of the officeholder or officeseeker to remember faces and names is a valuable asset. Though the elevator boy occupies a humbler station, a good memory is just as essential in his work. He must remember the name of the person who called this or that apartment, and the message. Packages without addresses are left in his care, and he must make no mistake in delivering them. The baby in its perambulator outside is crying. The apartment is filled with babies; he could make no greater blunder than to call the wrong mother. Members of a family go out, telling him to tell other members when they will be in, and what to do while waiting. He is rewarded, but often not in proportion to the tasks put upon his memory.—Boston Herald.

Expected Too Much

They were looking over a house the agent warmly recommended. It was in rather poor condition, and one room appeared to be particularly dilapidated.

"But look, man!" cried the prospective tenant. "We couldn't live in a place like this! Why, there's actually moss growing on that damp wall."

The house agent flushed.

"My dear sir," he retorted indignantly, "at the rental I'm asking, you surely don't expect orchids, do you?"

Fighting Fire in Home

In case a fire starts in a room, close all doors and windows to prevent a draft. Give the alarm promptly. A few pails of water thrown on at first may do more good than thousands of gallons later. A blaze may often be smothered with a rug or blanket. If the clothes catch fire, lay the patient flat on the floor at once; running about fans the flames, which tend to burn upward toward the face. Smother the flames with a heavy coat, rug or blanket, if water is not at hand.

Watermarks in Paper

Watermarks in paper have been used for a long time to lend distinction to the product of a particular paper maker and for other purposes. One of the oldest, a circle surmounted by a tall cross, is found in documents dating back to the Fourteenth century. Other old marks are the fleur-de-lys, the court jester, the huntsman's horn, the hand pointing to a five-pointed star and the tankard, well known in papers of the Sixteenth and Seventeenth centuries.

Rigid Rules Laid Down for Wifely Deportment

Wifely comportment of the standard of 1393 is outlined in an excerpt from "The Goodman of Paris," recently translated into English for the first time by Eileen Power. The author, a Paris merchant, was sixty years old, his wife fifteen:

"When you go to town or to church you should be suitably accompanied, according to your estate, and especially by worthy women, and flee suspicious company . . . and as you go, bear your head straight, keep your eyelids lowered and still look straight before you about four rods ahead and upon the ground, without looking nor turning your gaze upon any man or woman to right or top left, nor looking up, nor glancing from place to place, nor laughing nor stopping to speak to anybody on the road. And when you have come to church, choose a secret and solitary place before a fair altar or image, and there remain and stay without moving hither and thither, nor going to and fro, and hold your head upright and keep your lips ever moving saying orisons and prayers."—Kansas City Star.

Child Behavior Merely Reflection of Parents'

There is no mystery about children. They are puzzling, often, but they are never incomprehensible. At least, they are not incomprehensible to old folks and I think they need not be to parents.

Fathers and mothers are themselves the keys to their offspring. A disorderly father should be able to understand why his image will not put away his toys. A quick-tempered mother should not have to call a doctor for her daughter's tantrums; he can only advise self-control—in the mother.

The mystery is about parents, young parents, busy with their own affairs, too preoccupied with their future to think of the present of their children and to recall how it was with them when they were young.

"Run away, now, and play. Papa is reading his newspaper."

Parents say that, not grandparents. Grandparents do not consider the news so important as parents do. Grandpa has time and memories, some self-knowledge, some sense of proportion. —Lincoln Steffens in the North American Review.
