Camp Built by Roman Legions in Scotland

The destruction by fire of a great part of Feddal castle in the Braco parish of Perthshire, brings into prominence a district with a long history.

Braco parish contains one of the best-preserved Roman camps in Great Britain. The numerous forts in the vicinity indicate that the Romans here had a strong lodgment; and the extensive camp has been the subject of great controversy on questions concerning the scene of the battle of the Grampians.

The camp consists of several definite parts—the station or citadel, designed as a permanent structure, 420 feet by 375 feet in dimensions; the Praetorium, for the military leaders, measuring 60 feet square, enclosed by a wall within which was a building now assumed to have been a place of worship; the procestrium, strongly fortified and extending to 1,060 feet by 900 feet in area, giving accommodation for about 400 men; the great camp northwest of the procestrium, 2,800 feet by 1,950 feet, capable of accommodating 26,000 men; and the small camp farther west, measuring 1,910 feet by 1,340 feet, with accommodation for 12,000 men. Few places, indeed, can boast of more interesting relics than Braco.—Weekly Scotsman.

Weather Vanes Found of Ancient Invention

The weather vane, which has a vogue among architects of today is said to be an ancient invention. Vitruvius, in the era of the Roman empire, called it a triton, perhaps because it sometimes took that form. Today it is often called a weathercock, because the figure of the cock, which lends itself very well to the turning of the wind, has often been employed.

The weather vane has had many forms. Its usual one on castles, towers and secular buildings was that of the banner. Singularly enough, the cock seems to have appeared first on churches. According to one historian, it symbolized clerical vigilance. The figure of a ship has been used; that of the bird and on a famous exchange in London, that of a grasshopper.

A bit of interesting information on this subject crops up in Albert H. Sonn's three volumes on "Early American Wrought Iron." He gives a sketch of the Indian weather vane which surmounted the old Province house in Boston and says that it was made by Deacon Shem Drowne, who made the grasshopper on Faneuil hall, and it once topped the cupola of the old Province house, Boston, but is now part of the collection of the Massachusetts museum. — Hartford Courant.

Dogfish Too Playful

A young Florentine who had rowed his patino (a raft boat used on the Tuscan coast by bathers) about half a mile out to sea, near Viareggio, says the Rome correspondent of the London Sunday Observer, caught sight of a huge fish coming toward him, which he mistook for a dolphin and lightheartedly proceeded to kill with his oar.

The animal turned out to be a "smeriglio," a kind of dogfish, some 20 to 25 feet long. It drove its teeth with such force into the end of the patino that it could only free itself by leaving several of its teeth behind. During this struggle the boat was overturned, but the bather was a good swimmer and managed to gain possession of it, and had still enough strength to make vigorous signs of distress to neighboring boats, which came to his rescue, and had the strange and fortunate result of frightening away the giant fish.

Queer Wills

Elizabeth Orby Hunter may have been a little odd, but she tempered her eccentricities with caution. When she died in 1813 she bequeathed 200 guineas a year "to my beloved parrot, the faithful companion of 25 years," but she also added a proviso to the effect that whoever had the bird in charge must prove its identity twice a year when the money was paid, or the annuity ceased.

Equally odd was the will of an English lady who left 70 pounds a year for the support of her three goldfish, including a provision for flowers to be put upon their graves when they finally shook off their mortal fins.

Dumas Loved to Eat

The last of the books that emanated from the facile pen of Alexander Dumas, the great French writer, was a cook book. It contained recipes for preparing eggs in 56 different ways. The famous author was as happy over the perfection of an original dish as he was at the successful creation of a fiction character. The value he himself placed on his cookery is revealed in his own words: "I see with pleasure that my culinary reputation is increasing and promising soon to efface my literary reputation."

Tiny Model of Devon

With the simplest hand tools, an ingenious Englishman named Martindale, has made a remarkable model of Devon and the surrounding country.

Over 50,000 parts have already gone to make up the completed sections. Railway coaches consist of 3,000 separate parts, and are complete even to the views and mirrors over the seats. The wheels of a bicycle, although only the size of a penny, have 28 spokes. When complete the model will be 30 feet in length.

Folly

In Judge Wilson's court recently, a middle-aged man protested vehemently against a heavy fine imposed on him for an act he had committed just in fun.

"I imposed that fine," stated his honor, "because you are old enough to have known better. Some kinds of fun are like insurance. The older you are, the more it costs you."—Los Angeles Times.

A CHALLENGE TO CIGAR SMOKERS
Who Say a Good Cigar Can't Be Made for 5c

There are lots of five-cent cigars, we admit, that don't always give you full value for your nickel. But here's one that works the other way: Bayuk's Havana Ribbon. You can prove it: Put a Bayuk Havana Ribbon 'longside some other five-cent cigars. Mix 'em up. Choose and smoke them blindfolded. You'll single out the Bayuk Havana Ribbon quick as you can spot a rose in a cabbage patch!

Flavor? Fragrance? Mildness? You never before experienced anything like it in a nickel cigar. Because Bayuk's Havana Ribbon contains no bitter, under-ripe nor "flat," over-ripe tobacco. But true-tasting, flavor-laden ripe middle leaves of the plant. And long-filler, at that! If you want to know how we can do it, read some of our other ads. Meantime, don't delay making the above experiment. There's a counter near. Also Practical Pocket Packages of five cigars.
