Many County Schools Will Participate In Program

FIRST SESSION HERE

Beginning next Monday, September 16, Sunday Schools of Kent County will hold their annual district rallies. The rallies will last for five days and meetings will be held at Chestertown, Millington, Still Pond, St. James, and Rock Hall.

The rallies are sponsored by the Kent County Sunday School Association, the World's Sunday School Association, the International Council of Religious Education and the Maryland-Delaware Council of Religious Education.

The officers of the Kent County group are as follows: President, E. K. Mohr, Chestertown; Vice-president H. L. Higman, Millington; Secretary-Treasurer, Mrs. Robert R. Hill, Kennedyville; Assistant Secretary, Miss Emma C. Shafer, Kennedyville; Recording Secretary, Mrs. Richard Groves Chestertown.

The superintendents of the association are: Children, Miss Mabel M. Norris, Still Pond; Young People, Bayard Ayres, Rock Hall; Adult, Rev. William Lyndon Hess, Galena; Vacation and Week-Day Training, Rev. E. A. Sexsmith, Chestertown.

On Monday, September 16th, the rally will be held in the Chestertown M. E. Church. In addition to that church the Christ M. P. Church, The Protestant Episcopal Church, Bond Chapel and Mowbray Chapel schools will participate.

On Tuesday, September 17th, the Millington M. E. Church will be the scene of the rally. Other schools participating at Millington include the Millington M. E. South, The Protestant Episcopal, the Massey Protestant Episcopal, the Galena Methodist Episcopal, the Galena Methodist Protestant, the Locust Grove Methodist Episcopal, the Sassafras Methodist Protestant and the Chesterville M. E. South.

The Still Pond M. E. Church will be the scene of the rally for that district on Wednesday, September 18. Other schools taking part will be the Betterton Methodist Episcopal, the Betterton Protestant Episcopal, Kennedyville Methodist Protestant and Lynch Methodist Protestant.

Thursday, September 19th will see the district schools gather at St. James M. P. Church. Other schools in this district are Salem Methodist Episcopal, Worton Methodist Episcopal, St. Paul's Protestant Episcopal, I. U. Protestant Episcopal.

The week of rallies will close on Friday, September 20th, with a gathering of the Rock Hall district in the Rock Hall Methodist Episcopal Church. In addition to the Rock Hall M. E. Church others participating will be the Piney Neck Methodist Episcopal Church, Wesley Chapel Methodist Protestant and Raum Chapel Methodist Protestant.

At each of the rallies the exercises will be opened at 2 p. m., by the pastor of the Host Church and will continue through the afternoon and evening until 9 p. m.

Joseph H. Cudlipp, State Worker and E. K. Mohr, president of the Kent County Sunday School Association, will be the principal speakers at the different rallies.

Juvenile Love at Last Has Legal Definition

A Los Angeles couple eloped to Stanta-Ana with the intention of getting married, but failed of the desired object owing to the fact that both were minors. Later, the young man was sued by the irate father of the girl.

When the case came up, the attorney for the defense asked that the action be dismissed on the ground that no harm had been done, that if any offense had been committed both parties were equally at fault and that when all was said and done, it was just a case of puppy love.

"What do you call puppy love?" asked the court.

"Well," replied the attorney, "it's the kind that's too young to have to get a license for."—Los Angeles Times.

How Soot Is Measured

From measurements made with an interesting gauge at a London weather office, experts estimate that about six tons of soot fall on every square mile of the city's area in a year. The gauge consists chiefly of a funnel arrangement through which rain water falls, and is collected into bottles. Once a month, the content of the bottles is subjected to a chemical analysis and from this examination, the total amount of soot is computed.

How to Cut Bakelite

To saw bakelite straight clamp it between two pieces of scrap iron held in a vise, with their edges along the line to be sawed. Keep the saw close to the bars with the teeth pressed against them. Remove any roughness on the edge with a flat file.

Love and Romance

By CORONA REMINGTON

IT'S dreadful not to be the least bit in love; not even to have anything hanging around to fall in love with. On every side, my fiance, my girl, my husband, my wife. Everybody had somebody—except Violette Ramsdale.

Then came John Hodges. He walked into her life as easily and unexpectedly as—well, as most lovers do. The minute she saw him she knew he was going to propose to her.

"I'm mighty glad to meet you," he said, grasping her hand warmly. There was something so spontaneous and outgoing about his nature that no one could help liking him, nor feeling liked by him.

"And so your name is Violette? May I use it?" he asked as they parted.

"I—I'm glad you like it," she said, after a moment. "Yes, you may call me that."

For the girl all life had changed. The sun seemed to shine with a new significance, the flowers bloomed just for her. Life was so important now, so real, yet so unreal. Could she be the same girl? Surely not.

Hodges took her here, there and everywhere. Each evening they were together and often lunch time found them seated across the table from each other in some quiet little restaurant. He wooed her impetuously, sent her flowers and brought her candy.

"You're so good to me," she said gratefully one evening as he was rising to go.

"How could anyone help being good to you?" he asked.

Violette flushed and trembled. He was going to propose, she knew. What should she say? What should she do?

"Violette, I—I love you."

He was drawing her into his arms, his eyes looked big and almost startled, so close to hers. "You lovely thing," he said reverently, kissing her.

Later in going over his every word for the fortieth time it occurred to her that, after all, he had not really proposed, that is, he had not actually said the words, but of course he meant it; did he mean it? The rest of the night was not so pleasant, and by the time she finally fell asleep she was glad that she had only let him have two little kisses.

The next morning she was decidedly uneasy, and she remembered now a slight feeling, not exactly of mistrust, but perhaps more a feeling of not complete trust, that she had always had when she was with him. But it was so sweet to be loved, and she had been so lonely.

"What makes you so quiet and soiemn today?" asked her employer, Jim Foster. "You don't seem a bit like your happy little self."

Violette flushed and looked down at her typewriter.

"I don't believe it's anything," she said shakily.

"Well, if you need any help or advice, Violette, remember Jim Foster's right here."

She flashed him a grateful look and turned to the jangling telephone.

"This is John, darling," came the voice over the wire. "I'm so sorry I have a business engagement and can't get down to take you to lunch today. So, so sorry, dear."

So she went alone at noon and chanced to go to a dainty little tea room a few blocks down the street. She would not go to any of their favorite haunts. It would make her feel all the lonelier. She had been sitting there a few minutes when she recognized the back in front of her as John's own well-tailored back. He was leaning across the table talking to a pretty girl.

"You know I love you," she heard him say in a low tone, and in her horrified mind Violette could see his eyes glowing as they had when he had kissed her the night before. She jumped up and hurried out of the tea room unobserved.

"Why, what's the matter, Violette?" her employer asked as she rushed into the office. "You haven't been gone ten minutes and you look as if you'd seen a ghost."

"Oh, nothing, nothing, nothing!" she wailed, bursting into tears.

"Well, there's only one place for you to cry, and that's right here."

He held her quietly in his arms and stroked her soft hair.

"You know," he was saying gently, "you need a man like me to shoulder your woes, and when you are tired of running around with that he-vamp I'm going to propose to you, dear. I've been watching you, though, and I believe in letting a girl have it out. Sooner or later you'll find out he's not the kind for you, else I'm very much mistaken in him or you."

It was not romantic, this second proposal of hers, but it was so comportable and safe and good.

"I'm through," she answered meekly a moment later. "I've found out, but I would have had to have that first experience to be able to appreciate you. I know now there's a big difference between love and romance. There's some love that's romance, but there's a whole lot of romance that isn't love."

"Right you are, but ours shall be both," he promised happily.

The canal through Kent Island, proposed last winter by the Claiborne-Annapolis Ferry Company, has been definitely abandoned, and the charter permitting same has been surrendered. This was decided by the Ferry Company last week.

The estimates on constructing the canal and a mile of jetties on the bay side was so prohibitive that the project could not be carried through with any hope of financial return. It has been a real disappointment to the directors of the Company, who have invested heavily in Kent Island real estate through which the canal was to have run.
