BRITAIN'S REAL RULER.
DRUGS IN THAT PRISON?
WHY INDUSTRIES GROW.
EDISON'S SUCCESSOR.

Ramsay MacDonald, elected head of the British Empire by the Labor party, is here, the first British Prime Minister to visit the United States, while in office.

Mr. MacDonald's reception will be that accorded to royalty, which is not exaggerating his importance.

The Prime Minister is the most powerful man in England. The King, addressing his lords and commons, says exactly what the prime minister tells him to say.

Miss Ishbel MacDonald, here with her father, will seem old-fashioned to many of our rising female generation.

She does not smoke or drink alcoholic liquors and does not paint or powder her face.

And most old fashioned of all, she does look after her father and takes a serious interest in public affairs.

Germany mourns the loss of Stresemann, great and patriotic leader, having actually worked himself to death for Germany. Before he died, he had the satisfaction of negotiating the evacuation to the Rhineland, thus restoring to Germany her territorial integrity.

The tragic rebellion of convicts in the Colorado State prison has ended. One hundred and fifty convicts walked out, hands raised above their heads, in surrender.

Four leaders of the rebellion had killed themselves. During the night the convicts, at intervals, had thrown out of an upper window the bodies of guards captured and murdered by them, the warden having on each occasion refused to let them go free.

Once a prison inmate was a poor and miserable creature, with poor and miserable friends, if any.

Some woman, sad-faced, might come to see the man in jail, bringing her child, to see him, through the bars, giving him, perhaps, a few cents' worth of tobacco.

That is all changed in these bootleg days. Convicts have, outside the prison walls, gagster friends that control money unlimited. Convicts can afford to buy privileges, including drugs, even at the high prices charged in prison traffic.

That drugs played a part in the Colorado outbreaks, with its reckless disregard for death, and its suicides, seems probable.

Guards will learn from the Colorado tragedy to watch their prisoners carefully, and to watch, with especial care, any guard or other person engaged in the prison drug trade.

The X-Ray is used in the purchase of mummies.

Professor Langmuir in the General Electric research laboratory shows a life-size X-ray of a mummy, taken through all its wrappings. The outer edges of the vertebrae show indications of arthritis in those ancient days.

The Field Museum in Chicago will purchase no mummy until its genuineness has been demonstrated by X-rays, showing the bony structure of the old Egyptian inside.

X-rays and other scientific processes are used in selecting merchandise of many kinds.

An observer of high finance says industry progresses rapidly "because sons of very rich men play polo and golf, neglect business inherited from their fathers, and allow ablер men to extend and develop the business."

That is true in some cases. No Vanderbilt runs the New York Central Railroad, no Ryan manages street car lines, no J. J. Hill descendant manages great railroads in the West. But it isn't true always.

For instance, John D. Rockfeller, Jr., not conspicuous on the golf course or polo field, runs successfully the biggest business in the world, turned over to him by his father, now past ninety.

And the American Tobacco Company is run with an extraordinary success, to which its competitors will testify, by a very young man, George W. Hill, who inherited the job from his father.

Here and there young men inherit ability and ambition with great wealth, but not often.

It is easy to successed in spite of poverty.

It is easy to succeed in spite of wealth.

Wilbur D. Huston, brilliant boy from Seattle, 17-years old, has begun his scientific career at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, chosen succeed Thomas A. Edison."
young man in the country.

Everybody wishes him success, and he will have it.

Thousands of other boys may comfort themselves with the knowledge that they have as good a chance as this young man, and perhaps better, although nobody selected them "to succed Thomas A. Edison."

CHURCH NOTES

Still Pond M. E. Church

Harvest Home Services will be held in Still Pond M. E. Church on Sunday morning and evening, October 13th. Rev. Harvey Ewing, of Newark, Del., who has been with us on former occassions, will be the speaker. The church will be decorated as usual with flowers and fruits of the season. We trust that all will do their part to make this a real "Harvest Home."

Rev. W. D. Short, pastor of our church, and Bro. A. J. Hackett, Supt. of our Church School, are greatly interested in this event and desire the earnest support of the people.

Let us count our blessings and give heartily unto the Lord, whether great or small. We ca nget least bring ourselves that His house may be filled.

Olivet M. E. Church, Galena
