THE TRANSCRIPT

THE GRAND JURY for the October term of the Circuit Court for this county are to be commended for their speedy work. They were in session only two days and accomplished much work in that unusually short space of time. It was discharged by the court with thanks, Tuesday afternoon.

"Let there be light and there was light" was the beginning of the great work of creation. Since that time light has been synonomous with all things clean and pure in contradiction to the works of darkness. The whole world owes a great debt of gratitude to Thomas Edison who invented the electric light, the great illuminator of our homes and streets. It was very fitting that the president of the United Staes should be present and speak at the celebration of the fiftieth anniversity of that great gift to mankind. And that the great in the land should be there to honor the great inventor. It is not often that one lives to be so honored. Generally prosterity will laud those who have passed, but Edison is here to see many of his inventions perfected. In his modesty, Edison says that the honor is due to many others who helped in his laboratories, but his was surely the master mind, that set others, less gifted, to work.

DR. TITSWORTH TALKS ON PEACE

Mankind's entire habit of thinking and talking must be changed before war will be swept from the face of the earth, President Paul E. Titsworth, of Washington College told assembled faculty and students last Thursday morning when he formally opened the Eastern Shore institution for the autumn term.

Speaking on "The Technique of Peace" the local educator brought out the fact that the entire vocabulary of all races is interwoven with martial terms and that we cannot escape using them. Even church hymnals are interspersed with warlike songs and phraseology, he said. Mankind has been so accustomed to thinking about war that a veritable revoluton will be necessary in men's mental processes before Mars is routed from men's minds. We must also stop talking war and think more about peaceful projects and abolish the fallacy that peacetime pursuits are less virile than warlike activities.

Merely talking about place will not bring about the end to which men's minds are turning today, President Titsworth declared. Direct and definite action must be taken by humanity, looking toward the organization of peace in the same way that war is now strongly organized. Mankind must learn the technique of peace in the same way that the technique of war is taught recruits and a definite organiation must set up whereby all men may engage in the positive pursuits of peaceful projects. He paid a tribute to the work of the League of Nations in its successful efforts along this line as well as to the parleys between President Hoover and Prime Minister MacDonald of Great Britian. One man may start a war, he said, but it takes many men to bring about the conclusion of peace, hence his plea for peaceful thinking and acting on the part of each individual so that the habit of war may be eradicated and constructive pursuits substituted in its stead. War, the Shore educator emphasized, is a disease and as such it must be treated.

The nations of the world must be taught to think of each other as human beings since mankind differs very little, from clime to clime, in human attributes and passions. Recent inventions and the industrial revolution in Eurpoe and Americ have brought about a stronger international feeling and a broader charity of mind on the part of once contending nations so that the time is now ripe for real efforts for peace. "The time will come when war will be as extinct as the feudal system," declared Dr. Titsworth. "Meanwhile racial suspicions may be removed by the increased tendency of people to travel from one country to another and by new and improved communications between nations." Last summer approximately 500,000 Americans went to Europe, he said.

The entire world is interested today in the technique of peace with the exception of jingoists and militarsts, said the local academic head. States are no longer independent of each other and the rapidly growing volume of international business is emphasizing that fact. Voters are turning awau from diplomats and warmakers and are electing men to office, men who understand the economics of the state and who are working along peaceful and constructive lines with a view to eliminating international hatred. General Dawes and Owen D. Young were cited as examples of business men called upon to settle international problems.

Since Washington College was founded to develop citizenship and to mould young people into effective social forces present-day students of the Eastern Shore school and other young men and women were urged to aid in setting up a new ideal of international relationsnip and to serve the cause of peace as men in all past ages have served the cause of war. Otherwise it will be doubtful whether civilization will be worth all the agony our forefathers suffered in battle in order to preserve it, concluded the speaker.
