THE TRANSCRIPT

WITH THANKSGIVING OVER, Christimas is only a few weeks off and many are following the old slogan "Shop Early," and are giving thought to the purchasing of Christmas gifts. The merchants of Kent county are preparing the display Christmas goods and the people of this community are urged to visit local stores and look over the Christmas stock before buying away from home. The progress of a community depends largely on the activity of the merchants and if this community is to continue growing it will come through the continued efforts of our merchants. For this reason they should be granted the privilege of filling your needs if they have them in stock.

STARLINGS

Everywhere one goes now one sees a flock of starlings. So big and numerous are they that the English sparrow flies before them. The following is from the Washington Post.

Confronted with their annual fall problem of what to do about the nuisance roost of thousands of starlings on Pennsylvania avenue, the District Commissioners are considering calling in experts of the Department of Agriculture to help evolve a plan which will prove effective.

With the number of starlings roosting on the Avenue growing rapidly from year to year, the Commissioners agree that something should be done to relieve the National Capital's most famous street of the nuisance. But what to do is, they admit frankly, another question.

The problem was considered last year but no action was taken beyond ineffective noise making at night to rid the ledges of the District Building of the roosting birds. It was sold that the birds were protected under the migratory bird act which prohibited killing them Subsequently, however, the Department of Agriculture removed from its shoulders any criticism for protecting the nuisance birds by declaring that the birds undoubtedly were a nuisance in large numbers and there was no law which prohibited action to drive them away from the Pennsylvania avenue roost.

Agriculture Department experts prepared a pamphlet which was published by the department, setting forth the history of the bird in the United States. The millions of starlings now in existence throughout the country from Maine to the Carolinas and the Atlantic Ocean to the Mississippi are the progeny of 57 starlings which were brought from England and released in Central Park in New York by an Englishman who had come to live in America and wanted some starlings here, too. The spread of the birds has been more rapid in recent years and Washington has been for the last several years well within their breeding zone and year-round habit.

ATTENTION !

The 4H Club of Fairlee will hold an interesting entertainment in the Fairlee school building, on Friday Evening, Dec. 6th

at 8 o'clock, Admission 25 cts.; Children under twelve 15cts.

The outstanding features, will be two one act plays; entitled, "A Precious Pickle," and "Not A Man In The House."

"A Precious Pickle," is a snappy one act comedy. Three city girls are on their vacation in the country. Juno, the colored cook, wishes them anywhere, except where they are; this part is played by Virginia Miller. Mrs. Gabble, the town gossip, can tell you more news in five minutes than you can comprehend in half an hour. This role is successfully played by Mrs. Walter Morris.

"Not A Man In The House," is also a one act comedy. Mrs. Bings, the lady of the house, will not have a man enter her house; she is kept constantly on nettles, by her Irish Maid, Kate, who does her best to get a man in the house. These parts are played by Marian Reinhart, and Louise Ackerman respectively.

Come out and enjoy a good laugh with us!
