Modern "Weary Willie" Quite Fussy Individual

One hot day a wandering "laborer" in a fuzzy cap and ragged clothes asked at the Andrews farm near Spender for food without mentioning work. As it was just dinner time, the Andrews invited him in for the meal.

He looked at his chair at the table for some time, and Mr. Andrews, thinking he was diffident, urged him to sit down and make himself at home. He took out a cloth and dusted the chair first!

When night fell the stranger wanted to sleep in the house, but he had acted so peculiarly that Mrs. Andrews told him if he wished to spend the night there he must sleep in the wood bin. He took out all the wood, swept the place and put in a cot bed from the house.

"I want two clean sheets," he demanded belligerently, and then went on to call for a rug to step on in the morning, a chair to place by his bedside, and a mirror.

At dinner he had eaten eleven plates of a meat soup and five dishes of chocolate blanc mange. In the morning he wanted a button to match those on his coat and he obtained it. Then he offered to saw a little wood.

"He sawed about ten little sticks in a lackadaisical manner," related Mrs. Andrews, "and then said he would have to go. 'I think 50 cents would be about right for what you owe me,' he asserted."—New York World.

Buttons in Early Times Looked on as Luxuries

By the "History of English Dress," the button is traced to 1250. It was commonly worn in the time of Edward I, and figures in a poem that dates from about this time and certainly not later than 1390. This refers to a robe, the sleeves of which were decorated with blue buttons from the elbow to the hand. When points and laces were introduced in the Fifteenth century, buttons fell out of favor, but returned as a luxury in the following century, and were so highly appreciated as to be bequeathed in wills. A testator in a will dated 1573 left to one John Woodzyle, "my doublet of fruite-canvas, and my hose with frieze breeches. Also, unto Strowde, my frieze jerkin with silk buttons. Also, to Symonde Bisshoppe, the smith, my other frieze jerkin with stone buttons." Gascoigne sang of "a bonnet buttoned with gold."—Kansas City Times.

Church's Vast Property

The Trinity church tract, in New York city, contained about 52 acres and was variously known as the King's farm, the Duke's farm and the Queen's farm. Van Twiller, the Dutch governor of New Amsterdam, sold this tract in 1636 to Roelof Jans and by his will it became the property of his wife, Anneke. She died in 1663, leaving eight children, all of whom but one, Cornelius Bogardus, in March, 1670, executed an instrument known as a "transport" conveying the property to Col. Francis Lovelace, then governor of New York. Trinity church was incorporated by royal charter on May 1697. In 1703 Queen Anne formally presented the tract to the Trinity church.

A Wave Is a "Sea"

The term "sea" and "seas" has a variety of uses. A sailor never says "wave" or "waves," he speaks of "seas." A sea may be rolling toward you—that is a "head sea." One at the side is a "beam sea"; then the ship rolls. And a sea coming up astern is a "following sea"; then your ship tosses, and it is a point of debate among sea-sick travelers which of the two sorts of motion—rolling or pitching—is less agonizing.—From "Sea-Lore," by Stanley Rogers.

It May Be Urgent

When your Children Cry for It

Castoria is a comfort when Baby is fretful. No sooner taken than the little one is at ease. If restless, a few drops soon bring contentment. No harm done, for Castoria is a baby remedy, meant for babies. Perfectly safe to give the youngest infant; you have the doctors' word for that! It is a vegetable product and you could use it every day. But it's in an emergency that Castoria means most. Some night when constipation must be relieved—or colic pains—or other suffering. Never be without it; some mothers keep an extra bottle, unopened, to make sure there will always be Castoria in the house. It is effective for older children, too; read the book that comes with it.
