FEED THE BIRDS

IT IS HOPED that those who have the opportunity to do so, will feed the birds during this heavy snow. Unless they be feed they will perish from cold and hunger, as there is no way for them to get food as it is covered up under the snow. They can be seen in back yards, fields and woods looking for food. They are Gods creatures, are helpless at times like this and should be looked after and cared for by those who are in positions to do so. It is a real missionary duty we owe—lets prove equal to it.

NEVER WEARS AN OVERCOAT

EXPECTS TO LIVE 150 YEARS. HAS BEEN A BIG GAME HUNTER

Eats Once a Week, Sometimes

The following article appeared in the New York Herald about Mr. George P. Blackiston. Mr. Blackiston is known in Kent county where he has visited relatives. He has made a great success in the advertising business which he conducts in Canton, Ohio, and with offices in New York City.

G. P. Blackiston, who personally supervises "a group of High Pressure, High Voltage, Highly Perfected Individual Arts or Business," looked out across Bryant Park from his private study on the twenty-seventh floor of the Salmon Tower yesterday afternoon and noticed that nearly every one was wearing an overcoat.

"The trouble with all these people," Mr. Blackiston remarked, "is that they haven't developed thermostatic control. If they had they wouldn't be coddling themselves. You won't find many of them living to be a hundred years old."

Mr. Blackiston never has worn an overcoat in his life or woolen underwear or a pair of gloves or a sweater, yet he has tramped the Candian forests in the dead of winter. He said he was going to live to be 140 or perhaps 150 years old, barring accidents.

"I'm sure of it," he insisted. "I'd say 200, but I don't want to sound as though I were exaggerating."

Has a Fair Start

At the moment, Mr. Blackiston is fifty, stands six feet three and weighs 196 pounds.

He is a vegetarian, an advertising director and a big game hunter. In his two rooms in the Salmon Tower there are pot plants and flowers, and the tanned skin of a boa constrictor that was twenty-two feet, 2 inches long and thirty-one and a half inches wide before the tanning process shrunk it a little. Leopard and bear skins cover the floors. The walls and tables are adorned with horned toads, tufted birds, a handsome skunk, and the hide of a big crocodile which got along nicely down in Mexico without an overcoat for 400 years until Mr. Blackiston shot it squarely between the eyes.

Gilded on the door to Mr. Blackiston's office are the words "Private Study." A man lives in his office more than he does in his home and therefore ought to make it a pleasant place, he said.

Mr. Blackiston has his headquarters in Canton, Ohio, and branch offices in Chattanooga, Tenn., Chicago and several other cities, varying one from another in climate, and all of them considerably colder in winter than the interior of a steam-heated Pullman car. But Mr. Blackiston can get out of a Pullman, as he put it, "at 4 o'clock in the morning at a place, say, Saginaw, Mich., with the temperature 15 below," and walk down the street without an overcoat. He doesn't know what it is to sneeze; never has had a cold or cup of coffee in his life, and never has tasted liquor or tobacco.

Not Disagreeable About It

However, he doesn't seek to reform any one else or try to get persons to give up their bad habits. He remarked that he wished he had all the money he had spent buying drinks for other people. But these people, he said, coddled themselves and lacked thermostatic control. The way to get thermostatic control, he explained, was to live right.

"I like living," he said. "I think it's one of the greatest things in the world, life is. First thing every morning I take a hot bath. It opens your pores. After I've walked half a block I'm positively glowing. My hands never get cold. One day last winter I was up in the country near Bridgeport, Conn., watching some workmen and I reached in my pocket for my pen to sign a check. It wouldn't write. The ink was frozen. Yet my hands were warm, just as though it were summer.

"I never wear gloves, though I carry them with my cane for the sake of appearances. I don't like to have people think I look like a freak. Up until last year I never wore a waistcoat, but I had to have some place to keep my pens, pencils and memoranum, so I wear one now. The same weight suit serves me both winter and summer.

"You know I believe I could have gone to the North Pole or even to the South Pole with Admiral Byrd without an overcoat. I might have needed ear muffs, but not an overcoat.

One a Week, Sometimes

"These people you see wearing clothes, they answer dinner bells that sound outside their own beings. I have a dinner bell inside of me, and sometimes it doesn't ring for days and days. When it doesn't, I go without food. Once I went fourteen days without anything to eat or drink, and felt all right. I wasn't trying to fast. I just simply wasn't hungry, and unless I'm hungry I don't eat. Sometimes I eat once a day, sometimes twice, occasionally three times."

That, Mr. Blackiston hinted, is one phase of thermostatic control. If you've got it, he said, you never have that tired feeling. You tingle with energy and never let yourself worry.

"Why, when I get up to make an address to my salesmen," Mr. Blackiston said, getting up and addressing the reporter, "I make the walls tremble, I feel so full of fire and vigor and the joy of living."

Some of the things that Mr. Blackiston used to do he has given up because of his intention to live to be seven score and ten. He has several cars, he said, but he doesn't try to go seventy miles an hour any more. He recently abandoned speedboat racing. Before that he gave up piloting an airplane. Not, he said, because he hasn't faith in their future or thinks them highly unsafe. But there is a law of averages and though Mr. Blackiston hasn't had an accident in fifty years, he realizes that oftentimes in such matters the last hundred years are the hardest.

DEATHS

Annie A. Jones, widow of the late George W. Jones, a native of Kent County, was laid to rest in Shrewsbury Parish Cemetery on Monday, January 27, 1930. After suffering from pneumonia for one week she died on Saturday, January 25th, 1930.

Mrs. Jones was born in Kent County in 1840 and was the daughter of the late Joseph and Susannah K. Howard. She is survived by three daughters, Mrs. J. B. Crowding, Philadelphia, Pa.; Mrs. Vivian Spillman, White Sulphur Springs, West Virginia; and Mrs. Mary C. Johnston, Barrington, New Jersey; and one son, Mr. Jack Jones, Norwood, Pa.; and six grandchildren and ten great grandchildren.

Mrs. Jones lived most of her life in Kent County in and near Still Pond and was held in high esteem by all who knew her. Friends often marveled at the fact that despite her eighty nine years she was possessed of every faculty; reading the daily papers and discussing daily happenings with relatives and friends until the day of her last illness.

In addition to immediate relatives many friends in Kent were present at the burial services conducted by the Rev. Sewell S. Hepburn. Funeral services were held at her late residence 27 New Street, Upper Darby, Pa.

Lewin U. Skirven, a former farmer of Kent county, died of heart disease in the Maryland General hospital, Baltimore on Tuesday of this week, aged 54 years. He had just returned to his home in Baltimore from a trip to Florida when he was taken suddenly ill.

He was the son of Mrs. Virginia Skirven and the late John Walter Skirven, of this county and Baltimore. He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Ella R. Skirven and one son, J. French Skirven, of Jacksonville, Florida.

Funeral services were held from the home of his sister, Mrs. H. Stockton Startt, near Fairlee, on Thursday at 2 p. m., conducted by the Reverend J. Lee Marker, pastor of the St. James Methodist Protestant Church. Interment was made in the Chester cemetery here.

KENT HERD IMPROVEMENT ASSOCIATION ELECTS OFFICERS

A meeting of the Kent County Herd Improvement Association was held Tuesday afternoon in the Court House. Officers for 1930 were elected as follows:

President, Walter Walbert, Chestertown, Maryland.

Vice President, Olin Davis, Golts, Maryland.

Secretary-Treasurer, P. M. Brooks, Chestertown, Maryland.

Directors:

T. Ringgold Jones, Rock Hall, Maryland.

Sam Caldwell, Millington, Maryland.

J. I. Rigby, Chestertown, Maryland.

Twenty-one people discussed the work of the Association. Splendid results are being obtained. Records to date indicate that when the first year's work is completed in June there will be a considerable number of cows each producing 9000 to 10,000 pounds of milk or twice the average amount. It will be recalled that the Association began operating in June with a membership of twenty-seven progressive farmers.

The object of the Association is to put dairying on a real business basis. Each cow is charged with the market value or cost of pasture, roughage and grain feed she consumes. She is credited with the actual value of her product (basic and surplus milk.) The difference between the value of her product and the feed bill is the amount the farmer has to pay him for his labor, investment in the cow and equipment, etc. A man, to do the testing and to keep the records, is employed by the members. Mr. Austin H. Bickle is the local tester.

As a result of a study of the records made by the respective herds, three important points are revealed or measurd as follows:

1. Measures the cow by revealing whether or not she is worth keeping as shown by the quality and quantity of milk she produces, assuming the feeding to be right.

2. Measures the farmer in that it reveals his practice in feeding. If he fails to supply the proper feeds in suitable quantity and quality, if he is careless regarding the cost of feeds used, or neglects to adjust his crops so as to grow most of his feeds, the cows do not have a chance to prove their worth. Good cows may be condemned when the feed and feeder are really at fault.

3. Measures the value of the herd sire. The records of the dams and those of their daughters are compared. If the daughters give more milk and fat than the dams, then credit for the increase must be given to the sire. Likewise if the daughters produce less than their dams, assuming feeds and other conditions to be similar, then the bull has revealed that he is not worthy of further use. Whenever a sire is revealed to be producing daughters with production considerably greater than that of their dams, he should be kept in use as many years as possible. Such bulls are very valuable. The worth of a living bull is not established in a year but this indicates the wisdom of continuous testing year after year. Such bulls offer the quickest and cheapest way to improve our dairy herds.

For these reasons the Kent County Herd Improvement Association is a very important organization. There is need for more of them in Kent county.

PAINFUL CORNS
Loosen—Lift Out

A little known Japanese herb, the discovery of an eminent German scientist (Dr. Stickel) instantly soothes the corn, callous or wart then loosens it so that shortly you can lift it right out. This new discovery called "Corn Fly" excites the white blood corpuscles to action and granulates the corn at its root so that it drops out and leaves no trace of scar or soreness.

You will also find "Corn Fly Foot Bath Powder" a boon for sore, tired or perspiring feet.

"Corn Fly" for corns, 35c, "Corn Fly Foot Bath Powder" 25c, and "Corn Fly Bunion Remedy" 50c, (all three—$1.10 value—for $1.00), are sold under a positive money-back guarantee at

IN MEMORIAM

In loving remembrance of my father John Grulkey, who died January 30, 1921.

You are not forgotten father,
Nor never shall you be,
As long as life and memory last,
I shall still remember thee.

There is one that still will linger
At the spot where you were laid
Who will come and scatter flowers
On the grave that Christ has made.

By his daughter,
MRS. MATILDA HILL.

WHILE flowers bloom it will be easy to bring happiness to our friends and our loved ones. It is such a simple and easy and inexpensive thing to do. Why not call and have a bouquet of a potted plant or a beautiful fern sent out at once?

Every event is an occasion for flowers
