COLONIAL HIGHWAY IS OFFICIAL NAME OF FERRY ROUTE

On the eve of the dedication of the new ferry service from Kent Isalnd to Annapolis comes the announcement from the American Automobile Association, that the highway extending from Richmond, Virginia, to Washington, from Washington to Annapolis, from Annapolis to Kent Island and from Kent Island through Queen Annes county to Wilmington and Philadelphia, has now been officially designated on all national and international maps as the "Colonial Highway."

Covering, as it does, a trail plentifully dotted with spots closely associated with the earliest history of the original colonies, starting in Virginia, where Capt. John Smith made his original forays into the forest fastness, and continuing on to the national capital, through picturesque and quaint Annapolis, across the bay and into the Del-Mar-Va peninsula, the same of Colonial Highway seems exceptionally expressive of the territory traversed by this important boulevard.

New maps, issued this week, bear the title "Colonial Highway." In Queen Annes it starts at Matapeake, continuing through Stevensville, Chester, Grasonville, Queenstown, Centreville, Millington and on through Massey and Cecilton to Middletown and Wilmington. At Wilmington it proceeds through the city to Chester where it strikes 9th street continuing out Morton Avenue to Ridley Park and Darby and into Philadelphia on Woodland Avenue.

Coming north from Richmond the Colonial Highway passed through Fredericksburg, Alexandria and other historical spots in Virginia.

For the last several years various names have been applied to different sections of the route, but effective immediately the official A. A. A. designation will prevail on all road maps throughout the country.

After the First Twenty-five Thousand Miles

THE VALUE of sound design, good materials and careful craftsmanship is especially apparent in the new Ford after the first twenty-five thousand miles. Long, continuous service emphasizes its mechanical reliability and economy of operation and up-keep.

As you drive the Ford through many months and years you will develop an increasing pride in its appearance and a growing respect for the substantial worth that has been built into it. From every standpoint—in everything that goes to make a good automobile—you will know that you have made a far-seeing, satisfactory purchase.

Wherever you go, you hear enthusiastic praise of the car and this significant, oft-repeated phrase—"I'm glad I bought a Ford."

A FORD owner in New York tells of a 13,000-mile trip across the United States and back in sixty days and says "the car was extremely economical to operate, comfortable and speedy." A grateful father tells how the Triplex shatter-proof glass windshield saved his wife and children from serious injury.

To test tires, a large company drove a new Ford day and night, for an average of 500 miles every twenty-four hours. It was still giving satisfactory service after 105,000 miles.

A Ford car that had fallen into Fernan Lake was submerged for twelve days before being raised. After a new battery and carburetor bowl were installed, it was driven back to Spokane under its own power.

Many police departments have written of the special advantages of the Ford in crowded traffic because of its alert speed, acceleration, and ease of control. An increasing number of fleet owners are also purchasing the Ford because their cost figures have given conclusive proof of its economy of operation and up-keep.

In addition to important triumphs in Germany, France and Italy, the Ford won six out of seven leading places in a contest in Finland, first and second in the Rafaela races in Argentina, first and second in the run from Copenhagen-to-Paris-to-Copenhagen, three gold medals in England, first ranking in the durability test over the tortuous Amancaes road in Peru, and first place in the 1930 reliability run conducted by the Royal Automobile Club of Sweden.

This contest was an exceptionally severe test of endurance and sturdy construction because it was held in the dead of winter and covered 600 miles of steady running over snow-covered country roads and mountainous hills.
