THE TRANSCRIPT

A NUMBER OF wheat crops have threshed since our last issue and the been threshed and reports show the general yield is above the average, but of many years. The growing of grain in this section is a serious problem to our farmers and the outlook is certainly very discouraging. The price of wheat at the time of going to press was about 80 cents per bushel which is considerably below cost of production. Some relief must come to our farmers or bankruptcy will inevitably follow. It is claimed the recent tariff law is the direct case of slump in wheat prices.

WHEAT CROP UP TO AVERAGE

Contrary to the old saying, "No Straw, No Wheat," those farmers who have threshed in different sections of the county report an average crop.

The crop of straw is very small due to the long drouth before harvest. Combines are playing an important part in the wheat harvest in the county this year.

HOG CHOLERA.

SUMMARY OF OUTBREAKS OF HOG CHOLERA IN MARYLAND DURING JUNE, 1930

The disease was reported to exist on 7 premises during the month, against 15 a year ago, and an 11 year average of 15 for the same period. Five were classed as backyard outbreaks, while 2 occurred on farms where hogs are bred and raised, but a garbage feeding plant was maintained on 1 of these farms. All 7 were classed as primary, or new outbreaks.

For the first time in the history of the hog cholera work in Maryland, Howard County lead the procession. However, honors were easy, as that County only reported 2 outbreaks, involving 9 hogs. Anne Arundel, Caroline, Frederick, Prince George and Worcester, each reported 1 case of the disease.

Six of the outbreaks were apparently due to feeding bones, rinds, or scraps of infected pork in garbage, table scraps, kitchen swill, etc. In one instance sufficient information could not be obtained on which to base the source of infection.

On the premises where hog cholera was reported to exist during the month, there were 128 hogs when the disease appeared. Thirteen were dead, and 16 were visibly sick before the cases were reported. Seventy-eight per cent of the hogs were in the garbage feeding plant.

Grunts from the Air

For the fiscal year just ended, 313 outbreaks of hog cholera were reported against a 10 year average of 594 for the same period. Only 108 of these were on farms where hogs are bred and raised. This is approximately .35 of 1 per cent. of such farms in Maryland. As garbage feeding plants were maintained on 26 of these farms, the outbreaks on such places actually averaged less than .3 of 1 per cent. Two hundred and five were backyard affairs, 29 of which were garbage feeding plants. There were 5,538 hogs involved in the 313 outbreaks, and 1,033 of these were dead, and 1,189 sick, before the cases were reported. Twenty-five hundred and forty-four hogs, or 46 per cent. of the total were in the 55 garbage feeding plants in which the disease appeared. The double treatment was only administered during the year to the hogs on .16 of 1 per cent. of the farms other than those on which garbage feeding plants were maintained.

Little drops of virus,
Little scraps of rind,
Makes the producer's profit
Very hard to find.
