Tells of Experience With Dreco Treatment

Morgantown resident says: "Feel better than I have in years"

Mr. Geo. Gross

"My stomach was sour and gassy, and I felt miserable at all times," said Mr. Geo. Gross, of Morgantown, W. Va. to one of the Dreco Experts.

"It is strange that so many sufferers from stomach trouble wait till they are down sick and unable to attend to their duties before starting on a medicine like Dreco.

"The Dreco treatment ended my suffering and made me feel better than I have in years."

Dick and His Tomorrows

By CLARISSA MACKIE

(Copyright.)

"BROKEN your engagement to Dick?" repeated Mrs. Merton, with a long searching look at her daughter.

There was an almost inaudible "yes" and then silence on the part of the girl at the window, staring down the straight garden walk.

"Would you like to tell me about it, Helen?"

Helen shrugged her shoulders. "Anyone might guess, mother. It is Dick's habit of taking the little end of things in such a cheerful way. At the office, for instance, he will not push himself toward a better position. He always says, 'I'll just plug along—my turn will come tomorrow.' Yesterday, it seems that Mr. Franklin suddenly resigned his position as head of that department, and Arnold Smith walked right into the president's office and asked for it—and got it. Dick just calmly poked along, never thought of asking for the advancement, thought it was a fine chance for Arnold Smith! When I scolded him about it he merely laughed and said the same old thing!"

"That his turn would come tomorrow?"

"Yes. Then—one word led to another—and I told him I would not marry a man who did not recognize opportunity when he saw it—and so I ended it."

"Yes, dear, you ended your engagement for the same reason that you blamed Dick—you could not see and recognize an opportunity to hold the love of a mighty fine man with a great future!"

It was an unhappy summer for Helen Merton. Dick must be working very hard this summer for he looked rather thin and worn, but Helen met him face to face only once, and then his greeting was gravely courteous. He was seen driving Beth Blake in his shabby little car, and Mrs. Blake was quoted as saying that "Dick was a rising young man."

Then one night the blow fell. Merton sat down at the dinner table one August evening and glanced toward his wife. "They say young Lang has lost his position," he said.

"Oh, James, I am so sorry. Poor Dick has worked so hard—" Helen could listen to no more. With a murmured excuse she escaped to the old garden which had known all her joys and all her sorrows. She went to the very end where the gate opened into the orchard and discovered that her heart was racing madly. Poor old Dick and his never-to-be realized "tomorrow"! She was bowed with shame over her treatment of him. Through her tears, she glimpsed the blurred outlines of the old Lang house where Dick lived with his parents. She wanted to run over there as she had done in the past happy years—she wanted to tell Dick she was sorry he had lost his position and if he still loved her she wanted to marry him and together they would make a future!

She was half way through the orchard when she saw him coming in the old familiar way, swinging along under the low branches of the gnarled old trees, and she ran to meet him with wet eyes and outstretched hands.

"Oh, Dick, Dick, father has told me, and I am so sorry."

Dick took her hands and looked down at her very tenderly. "What did they tell you, Helen?"

"That you'd lost your position."

"They are saying the same thing all over town," he acknowledged.

Somehow, the incoherent words were at last whispered brokenly on Dick's broad breast.

"And so you are willing to help me build a home, out of nothing?" he asked at last. "Helen, are you willing to tie yourself to a man without a future?"

"We will have each other, Dick, and we will be happy together."

"So we will, darling, but you have misunderstood things a little and I am glad, too, for it shows that you do love me after all. They are telling it as a great joke that I have lost my position with the Blake company, but they always add that I have a new position there—secretary of the company. Isn't that wonderful?"

"Yes—and he's engaged to Beth Blake!"

"I don't care how high he soars, as long as I can have you and your tomorrows," sighed Helen.

Climbing Frog

The animal heard in the spring and called a peeper is a tree frog. It is a small climbing frog about 2 inches in length, of a color which matches tree bark so closely that it is seldom recognized. It has an opposable thumb and a sucking disk on the end of each toe, which enables it to climb trees, although it seldom ascends more than 20 feet.

Language Changes Made Over "Precise" Protests

Until about the middle of the Nineteenth century it was usual in pronouncing the word humble to refrain from sounding the h. Generally the word was preceded by an instead of by a. The changing to sounding the h came gradually as a matter of usage, as many changes in language come. In the end usage must be followed, though precise speakers resist it for a time. Even in fairly recent years a few persons persisted in pronouncing humble without the h. The variation you have observed on this point between an early and a later edition of Webster's dictionary is accounted for by acceptance of the change by the later editors. The gradual alteration in usage concerning the word humble was a subject of protest as long ago as 1853, when a correspondent of the periodical "Notes and Queries" illustrated his contention that the h should be silent by giving a list of what he stated to be the derivations of words in which the h should be silent. The words were heir, honest, honor, hour, humble and humor.

Of Course Henry Had Sent That Letter, but—

He kicked off his wet shoes, slid his tired feet into a pair of carpet slippers, lit his pipe, sat down in the easy chair with a sigh of relief, and declared that 20,000 wild horses couldn't make him stir from the house until the following morning.

"Henry," said his wife, "you posted that letter I gave you this morning, I suppose?"

"I did, my love," he answered, unblushingly.

"I asked mother to postpone her visit for a while," his wife continued. "You see—"

Henry did so. His wife saw, too. What she saw was the tired man jump from his chair, kick off his slippers, put on his shoes, and slip out into the murky street. And when, five minutes later, Henry came back with the tale that he had been to see how the thermometer outside the post office stood, she smiled.

Spanish Homes

Of all the Mediterranean styles of architecture in use today, there is probably none more popular or better known, especially for residential purposes, than the Spanish with its life and color.

The Spanish, having apparently been a home-loving race, developed their residential architecture to a higher degree than any other type of building. Where the Greek masterpieces are found in religious buildings, as is the case in most historical styles, the Spanish seem to have studied architecture from a livable point of view. Their principal contribution being residential, the Spanish house was designed for its owner's comfort in every way possible.

Stone Newspapers

Newspapers in the form of large stone tablets have been discovered during excavations at Ostia, in Italy. One is said to record the death of Pompey in 49 B. C., and the will of Julius Caesar with his bequests to the people of Rome. Because of his dispatches from the war in Gaul, Caesar is often called the father of journalism, but it seems that Cicero, born in 106 B. C., has a greater claim to his distinction. Cicero used to post in the galleries of his villa at Tusculum a record or journal of the passing events of note, with a list of births, deaths, and marriages. From a letter of Cicero's it is known that he used a system of abbreviated writing.

"Underground Railway"

The name of the system used to help slaves to freedom, the "Underground Railway" arose from the exaggerated use of railway terms in reference to the conduct of the system. Levi Coffin and Robert Purvis were the presidents of the road. Various routes were known as lines, stopping places were called stations, those who aided the system were called conductors, and the slaves were referred to as packages or freight. The system reached from Kentucky and Virginia across Ohio, and from Maryland across Pennsylvania and New York or New England.

"Old Nick" in Ireland

Because Ireland is the island of the saints, the Irish are not afraid of the devil, though he has left his mark in many parts of the Emerald isle. In beautiful Wicklow is the Devil's glen, cut out by the angry slashing of Old Nick's tail when he failed to lure a fair maiden from her convent. In Tipperary is the Devil's Bit—a huge bite taken out of the mountain range and spat down to the plain below, where it still stands as the Rock of Cashel. Then, of course, in Killarney is the Devil's Punch Bowl—but all it contains in these days is pure water.

Ancient Counterfeiters

Money forging was a flourishing business among the ancient Romans, judging from finds at Treves, Prussia, of tools and matrices for the coining of denarii. Excavations brought to light a great many matrices and castings made of bronze which were used to manufacture these silver coins. Proof that these implements, dating back to between 260 and 300 A. D., were tools of money forgers, is established by the fact that there was then no official mint at Treves.

Rural Mail Boxes

The postals laws and regulations say that the posts or other supports upon which rural mail boxes are erected shall be of neat design, and may be of wood, metal, or concrete, of suitable strength and dimensions; may be either round or square, plain or ornamental, with or without fixed or movable arm, and shall be painted white. The use of effigies as supports or of supports intended to represent figures or mechanical objects, either grotesque or otherwise, is prohibited.
