Hope to Find Use for Black Mamba's Poison

In the black mamba, spitting cobra of Africa, Dr. Adolph Monaelesser of New York, expects to find a cure for epilepsy and rheumatic afflictions.

Several years ago one of the spitting cobras was placed in the Bronx zoo. He immediately began spitting at every passerby. His aim is perfect even in the dark forest, and in the light of the reptile house he must have felt certain that he was blinding hundreds of people every day. Stimulated by his long procession of victims he spat and spat.

After a while the cobra noticed that the victims did not sink down and die, and that the venom was collecting upon the glass in front of him. Thereupon, he refused to spit, and even though zoo visitors collected in front of his cage and made faces at him, he ignored their presence and saved his venom.

The poison was removed from the glass and since has been used for experimental purposes. Additional black mambas are being imported, and experts eventually hope to prove that this deadly denizen of the jungle has his teleological place and that even cobras spit together for good.

Reminiscence of Early Days of "Fair Harvard"

The student who works his way through college is not fairly recent phenomenon.

He can go way back in 1657 in this country and find a precedent at Harvard. Incidentally, the child prodigy can find a precedent in the same case, for the student in question, Zachariah Bridgen, entered Harvard at the age of fourteen and graduated four years later, at the age at which many are just getting through high school.

Zachariah, according to information received by federal educational officials, served as a waiter and rang the school bell. The steward's books show him charged with "commones and sizings" (board, together with drink ordered from the buttery) tuition, "study-rente and beed" (room and bed), "fyer and candell" (fire and candles), "wood, etc.," and a charge for "bringing corn from Charlestown."

He was credited on his account with "silver, sugar, wheat, malt, Indian (corn) hooge and a bush of parsnapes." He was also given, on December 31, 1654, credit for "ringinge the bell and waytinge" 1 pound 2 shillings and 6 pence.

The total cost of an education at college in those days ran from $100 to $200 in silver and groceries.

Subject of Famous Painting

Briefly, the explanation of the famous painting called "The Huguenot" is as follows: By order of the duc de Guise, issued before St. Bartholomew's day, "all good Catholics" were enjoined to wear a white scarf as a distinguishing badge. The young woman pleads with her lover as she strives to fasten the symbolic white scarf. The lover will die in the morning. As one writer suggests, the picture is reminiscent of the famous line, "I could not love thee, dear, so much, loved I not honor more."

FREEDOM from so many of the everyday drudgeries of running the home . . . freedom from errand-running . . . freedom from tiresome shopping trips . . . hours of leisure for recreation.

A telephone in the home means a new lease on life. Do you have one? If not, do you know that you can have one for just a few cents a day. Better give us that order now.

Relief Came Only With DRECO

Mr. Geo. Williams was a victim of constipation

Mr. Geo. Williams

"For four years I suffered from a sour stomach and constipation," said Mr. George A. Williams, 26 Orchard St., Cumberland, Md. to one of the Dreco Experts. My tongue was coated and I always felt tired out.

"My only relief came when I tried the Dreco treatment. Since I've taken the treatment I have almost forgotten what it is to feel badly.

"Dreco Hi-speed tablets regulated my bowels and did away with that tired worn out feeling."
